U. S. Ship, Bombed, Fires on Spaniards; Hull Sends Protest Ordered by Roosevelt

Roosevelt Off To Dern Rites After Visiting Mt. Rushmore

Scope of Drought Parley Is Extended

Governors and Senators of 7 States Invited to Be Present.

By Franklyn Waltman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 30.—Sitting in his automobile high in the Black Hills of South Dakota, President Roosevelt today dedicated a face of Thomas Jefferson, father of American democracy, carved in granite on the side of Mount Rushmore as "a monument and an inspiration for the continuance of the democratic republic form of government, not only in our own beloved country, but we hope, throughout the world."

No sooner had the President spoken than the rumble of discontent abroad penetrated into this little town at the foot of the Black Hills. Hastening back to his train here in response to an urgent telephone call, President Roosevelt learned from Secretary of State Hull that an attempt had been made to bomb an American destroyer off the Spanish coast.

Mr. Roosevelt instructed Hull immediately to make representations to both the Spanish government at Madrid and the rebels. Announcement of this action came just before the President departed for Salt Lake City tonight to attend former Secretary Dern's funeral here Tuesday.

The President also announced that the Des Moines drought conference on Thursday had been "expanded" to include the Governors and United States Senators from Minnesota and Wisconsin. Thus representatives of seven States will attend the meeting with the President at Des Moines, including Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee. He agreed to the revised schedule today.

These developments came at the end of a day devoted by the President to attending religious services in a small Episcopal church here and a motor trip of 50 miles over the winding and precipitous roads of the Black Hills to and from the unveiling of the facial figure of Jefferson, cut into the everlasting granite of Mount Rushmore.

The Jeffersonian likeness, as a huge American flag was pulled back, took place beside that of George Washington for all future American generations to see. The two figures with those of Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt, yet to be completed, will comprise the Ruhmore Memorial designed by Gutzon Borglum, famed sculptor.

The Ruhmore unveiling ceremony was brief and informal. As soon as the Presidential party arrived on a plateau facing the Rushmore Memorial, half mile distant over a deep ravine, Borglum started the ceremonies. But really it was the second unveiling today of the completed face of Jefferson.

Borglum by his insistence on unveiling the Jefferson figure before noon—because he contended shadows obscured Jefferson's stone face after that hour—almost precipitated another controversy similar to that which attended his work at the Stone Mountain Memorial in Georgia some years ago.

The President insisted on going

Mrs. Ruth Owen Quits to Stump For Roosevelt

Daughter of Bryan Will Take Part in Campaign as Private Citizen.

By the Associated Press.

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 30.—President Roosevelt tonight announced acceptance of the resignation of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rhode as minister to Denmark. Mrs. Rhode, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, quit her post to campaign as a private citizen for the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt.

Only a few weeks ago the President attended with Mrs. Roosevelt the wedding of Mrs. Owen to a captain of the Danish King's guards.

The following exchange of telegrams was given out:

"The President: Desiring to take an active part in the campaign for your re-election and believing that I can be of more service if I campaign as a private citizen and not as a holder of public office, I beg to hand you my resignation as United States Minister to Denmark. Ruth Bryan Owen."

"Hon. Ruth Bryan Owen, Port Washington, N. Y.: While I am very loath to have you discontinue the very fine services you have been rendering as United States Minister to Denmark, I appreciate your reasons for wanting to resign and the motives that prompt you. I therefore reluctantly accept your resignation. Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Mrs. Owen said subsequent to her marriage July 11 to Capt. Boerge Rohde, that she would retain her old name as well as her job, although she expected to do a bit of electioneering before going back to her overseas post.

Her decision to quit the diplomatic service came after considerable speculation as to the effect of her marriage to the handsome Dane.

A former member of Congress from Florida and an accomplished and veteran speaker, she speaks in a different idiom than the polished and sonorous phrases of her famous father.

She once defined an ambassador as "a friend who introduces to each other two of his own good friends," and she uses some of that philosophy politically.

European Armament.

Premier Mussolini warned a rearming world he could mobilize 8,000,000 soldiers "in the course of a few hours." He rejected what he called "the absurdity of eternal peace."

In Paris neutral observers declared Mussolini's statement would result in speeding up France's military preparations. A Polish military mission was received in France amid acclaim by the press which heralded the event as an indication German rearmament had driven Poland back into the arms of France.

British diplomats feared the Italian premier's warning would "further surcharge the delicate European situation."

Avellino, Italy, Aug. 30.—Italy's Benito Mussolini warned a rearming world tonight he could mobilize 8,000,000 soldiers "in the course of a few hours and after a simple order."

Speaking from this heart of mimic war to his fighting men and his people, the dictator "rejected" what he called "the absurdity of eternal peace and declared his army was sharpened by its African victory.

Il Duce stressed that Italy desired to live in peace and pledged "our lasting, concrete, contribution to the project of collaboration among peoples."

But he told the thousands who cheered him to the echo in Avellino's municipal square that the world is in the throes of an "irresistible" rearmament race.

He did not mention the six weeks' civil war in Spain, between a

Warlike on Sea, on Land, And in the Heavens

Three paragraphs, highly significant of the temper of Benito Mussolini's address at Avellino yesterday, may give an insight into the purposes and intent of the Italian dictator. They follow:

"The conquest of empire was not obtained by compromise on the table of diplomacy.

"It was obtained by fine, glorious and victorious battle, fought with the spirit which has bent enormous material difficulties and an almost universal coalition of nations.

"It is the spirit of the Black Shirt revolution, the spirit of this Italy, the spirit of this populous Italy, warlike and vigilant on sea, on land, and in the heavens."

Secretary Hull told the story of the attempted bombing of the U. S. S. Kane yesterday in Spanish waters in the following official announcement:

The United States Destroyer Kane left Gibraltar at 8:12 August 30 en route to Bilbao, Spain, to assist in the work of evacuating American nationals from Spain. It will be recalled that since the inception of the present conflict in Spain, the American Government has repeatedly urged all American nationals to proceed from Spain to places of safety and has provided vessels to remove them from Spanish ports.

According to a report from the commanding officer of the United States Destroyer Kane at 4:10 p. m. August 30 at 36 degrees, 33 minutes north, 7 degrees, 35 minutes west, approximately 40 miles off the Spanish coast, an unidentified tri-motored, low-winged monoplane flew over the Kane and dropped two bombs which exploded near the vessel.

The Kane, which was flying the American flag at her foremast head and in addition had an American ensign horizontal on top of the well-deck awning, increased her speed to maneuver away from the plane.

Drops Third Bomb.

At 4:25 the plane again flew over the Kane and dropped a third bomb. At 4:26 the Kane's anti-aircraft gun fired two rounds in the direction of the plane.

At 4:32 the plane again flew over the Kane and dropped three more bombs, making a total of six, none of which struck the Kane or caused any damage to her. The Kane's anti-aircraft gun fired nine rounds in the direction of the plane during its approach and retreat.

The attitude of the American Government in respect to the unfortunate conflict in Spain is well known.

The American Government has stressed the complete impartiality of its attitude and has publicly stated that, in conformity with its well-established policy of non-interference with internal affairs in other countries, either in time of peace or in the event of civil strife, it will, of course, scrupulously refrain from any interference whatsoever in the unfortunate Spanish situation.

Bombing Laid to Mistake.

Since both the government forces and the opposing forces in Spain in the friendliest spirit have made every possible effort to avoid injury to American nationals and American property it can only be assumed that the attack on the United States destroyer Kane was due to its identity having been mistaken by a plane of one faction for a vessel of the other.

Because of this friendly attitude and the absence of any motive whatsoever to attack an American vessel, it is not conceivable that either a Spanish government plane or an insurgent plane would knowingly make attack upon an American naval vessel.

The Secretary of State, at the direction of the President, immediately brought this incident to the attention of the Spanish government, through the American Embassy at Madrid, and to Gen. Francisco Franco, informally through the American consul at Seville, with the request that both sides issue instructions in the strongest terms, as the American Government feels confident they will desire to do, to prevent another incident of this character, it being well known in every quarter that the sole purpose of the presence of American naval vessels about the Spanish coast is to afford facilities for the removal of American nationals from Spain.

Loyalists Admit Defeat in Fight On Toledo Road

Madrid, Aug. 30.—With an aerial fleet on constant patrol against new rebel bomb raids on Madrid, official government sources tonight admitted an "important reverse" in a decisive battle at the southwestern city of Oropesa.

The defeat, which official circles described as the most important since the Facist insurgents took Merida in their march from Badajoz toward Toledo and Madrid, was said by Julio Alvarez del Vayo, Socialist leader, to have driven the government forces back to Talavera on the road to Toledo.

Recapture of the lost ground was expected at any time, Alvarez del Vayo insisted.

Meanwhile, a new warning that citizens of the United States have one more chance to leave Spain, or

Kane Bombing Unprecedented In U. S. Annals

Naval experts last night could think of no "incident" involving an American man o' war which might be compared with the attempted bombing of the U. S. S. Kane off the Spanish coast.

There was the sinking of the U. S. S. Maine in 1898, of course, but the cause of that is still a matter of speculation, although a naval court of inquiry concluded the vessel was destroyed by "a submarine mine." The Maine disaster led to war with the country off whose coast the Kane escaped disaster yesterday.

During the insurrection in Brazil in 1894, revolutionists took over the Brazilian navy and held the Bay of Rio de Janeiro. Dr. Gama, the rebel leader, threatened to fire on any ship putting in to the piers to discharge its cargo. The merchantmen remained out in the harbor,

U.S.S. Kane One Of 5 Ships Sent To Aid Citizens

The destroyer Kane, which engaged in a skirmish with an airplane in Spanish waters yesterday, was one of five American ships sent to remove Americans from the revolution-ridden country.

The Kane and the destroyer Hatfield only recently arrived in the locality. Previously the United States had sent to Spain the battleship Oklahoma, the cruiser Quincy and the Coast Guard cutter Cayuga.

Only last week the Spanish government informed the United States that certain ports held by rebels were closed. The United States refused to recognize the blockade and gave renewed expression to its stand for freedom of the seas.

The Kane and the Hatfield moved out of New York on August 17 un-

Note Is Forwarded To Madrid, Rebels

Demands Both Issue Vigorous Orders to Bar Repetition.

An unidentified airplane attempted to bomb the United States Destroyer Kane in Spanish waters late yesterday, the State Department was informed last night.

As bombs dropped around the warship it fired several volleys at the plane from its anti-aircraft guns. Neither ship nor plane was hit.

On instructions from President Roosevelt, telephoned from Rapid City, S. Dak., where he is on a drought inspection trip, Secretary Hull immediately dispatched a protest to both the Spanish government and to rebel leaders in the Spanish revolution.

Hull asked both sides in the civil war to issue instructions in strongest terms to prevent another incident of the character.

The Kane, one of five American warships engaged in removing Americans from Spain, was about 40 miles from the Spanish coast en route to Bilbao on the Bay of Biscay.

It was displaying prominently two American flags, one from its masthead and one stretched horizontally on an awning above the ship. The ship's officers described the plane as a low-winged, trimotored monoplane, but apparently there was no way of knowing whether it belonged to the rebels or to the loyalists.

The plane dropped two bombs which exploded in the water beside the ship. Fifteen minutes later it returned and dropped a third bomb. The Kane immediately opened fire. The plane left, but returned shortly and dropped three more bombs, making six in all.

As the airplane approached for the third time, the Kane again opened fire, firing nine rounds of ammunition and driving the attackers off.

Incident Called Mistake.

In announcing the encounter, Secretary Hull suggested that the occupants of the plane undoubtedly mistook the Kane for a hostile warship. His statement again called attention to the noninterference policy of the United States in the civil war and added that this country "will, of course, scrupulously refrain from any interference whatsoever in the unfortunate Spanish situation."

Hull called attention to absence of any motive for either side in the conflict to attempt to sink an American ship.

It was stressed at the State Department that, although a protest will go to Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel leader, as well as to recognized government authorities, this action in no sense will constitute recognition of the rebels. It was pointed out that earlier in the revo-

Allen 'Goes on the Bum' in 7,000-Mile Journey To Determine the Results of WPA's Program

George E. Allen, District Commissioner, returned last night from a three-week tour of 24 States ready to fight anyone who says there's politics or graft in the Works Progress Administration.

Tanned from the scorching sun of the drought area and hardened from sleeping on the floor of a trailer, Commissioner Allen, upon returning to his suite at the Wardman Park Hotel, was as happy as a schoolboy home for Christmas holidays.

"Say, this WPA is great," he said, "but I wouldn't want to live in these trailers. I've got so used to sleeping on the floor, though, that I'm going to roll up in one of these rugs tonight rather than go to bed."

Just as he did two and a half years ago when he followed the breadlines in some of the largest cities to get first-hand information on the FERA, Allen left Washington without disclosing his purpose to more than a handful of persons, all of whom were sworn to secrecy.

Accompanied by Ross Haworth, his assistant, and Erwin E. Reynolds, local WPA research director, the Commissioner covered 7,000 miles, sleeping and eating in the trailer, and interviewed hundreds of WPA workmen, foremen and administrators. Allen paid his own expenses, but the WPA financed the expenses of his aid with the approval of Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator.

"Things have certainly changed since I made that hobo trip," Allen remarked. "Everywhere I went I saw signs of returning prosperity. People are working and the communities are behind WPA a hundred per cent.

GEORGE E. ALLEN.

"And as for these charges that WPA is riddled with politics: why, I can't get anybody to discuss politics. They seem to be leaning over backwards to avoid having anything to do with politics in the running of these WPA projects."

The District head of WPA gleaned many new ideas for improving the efficiency of the local administration from his trip, he said, although he found that the set-up here on the whole compared favorably with that of any other city or county in the country.

Going about unshaven for days and dressed in old clothes, Allen was able to talk with WPA laborers as man to man, he said, and so did not rely on the reports of the administrators, to whom he made his identity known.

The tour extended as far north as North Dakota, as far west as Salt Lake City, and as far south as New Orleans.

"When I left Washington I did so with real pride in the organization and accomplishments of the District WPA, assuming that it was a model for the Nation. I was gratified to find that the administrators in other States are doing similar work.

"In fact, in some jurisdictions the WPA activi-

By Gerald Gross.

"If I knew or thought that he was a narcotic agent I would take him in the alley and shoot him."

Messrs. Andrew Lago and Benjamin Venuti guffawed at this expression of Roscoe Celli's faith in Venuti. Then they filled up the wine glasses and pretty soon laughed some more.

Celli was a wholesale liquor dealer and saloon keeper in Galveston and, on the side, one of the most important dope smugglers south of the Mason-Dixon Line. Lago was his "front." And Venuti, why he was only a gay young fellow who bought "stuff" from Celli every now and then. But there had been ugly grapevine rumors about Venuti.

Five days before Celli's avowal of confidence in his friend, which occurred on February 2 of this year in the former's liquor shop, Venuti had bought 20 ounces of heroin from Joe Luke for $800. Joe was a big shot bookmaker in Houston—also with a sideline.

Luke is now serving a four-year sentence in Leavenworth. Celli is doing an eight-year stretch and Largo is a bail-jumping fugitive from justice. Defense counsel included a former Democratic gubernatorial candidate, a Republican national committeeman and three former United States attorneys. Consequently it was a long, hard pull for the Government to get the ringleaders behind bars.

Meantime Venuti, who dared disaster by fraternizing for six months with some of the toughest men on the Gulf Coast, is out making more cases on time borrowed from providence.

"The boys" knew him as Benjamin Venuti, but to Narcotics Commissioner Anslinger, directing his undercover work from halfway across the continent, he was Agent Benedict Pocorobo.

It was just a little more than a year ago the Bureau of Narcotics learned, through devious channels, that Oreste Celli, alias Roscoe, was a major drug dealer in the illicit

Howard Urges A Referendum On A. F. L. Split

By the Associated Press.

A rank and file referendum in the American Federation of Labor's family quarrel was proposed yesterday by Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union.

Unless ten unions affiliated with the John L. Lewis committee for industrial organization make peace with the federation's executive council before Saturday, they will be suspended for "insurrection."

These unions are promoting a drive to bring all the workers in each big industry into one union. The federation is controlled by a group which holds that all skilled craftsmen, as a rule, should belong to the union of their craft.

Howard is secretary of the Lewis committee, although his union has not formally affiliated. When the A. F. of L. executive council voted to suspend the ten unions that had joined the committee, it directed William Green, federation president, to ask Howard by what authority he had participated in the committee's work.

Howard's Reply Quoted.

In his reply, Howard said:

"It is common knowledge that many members of your executive council are not required to submit their official or personal acts directly to the members of their organization as does the president of the I. T. U.

"Under such circumstances why the inference that the president of the I. T. U. has acted in an irregular or illegal manner?

"If your executive council is desirous of learning the attitude of those who finance the A. F. of L. from their pay envelopes, I would suggest a referendum upon the question at issue."

At the same time, the Lewis committee announced an incomplete survey showed that three international unions, four State Federation of Labor, 30 Central Labor Unions and local unions "too numerous to list" had urged the executive council to recall the suspension order.

Lewis Program Approved.

Eleven State federations, 16 central bodies and "numerous" local unions previously had approved the Lewis program, the committee said.

The State federations protesting suspensions, the committee said, were Iowa, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Vermont. Those which favored the committee program before the suspension order was issued were Georgia, Virginia, Colorado, Nevada, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Montana, Wyoming, Kentucky and Alberta.

Labor men generally expect the suspension order to become effective Saturday, resulting in the loss of good standing by more than 1,000,000 members of the ten unions affiliated with the committee. Suspension of these unions, however, requires the two-thirds vote of a federation convention. The next convention, on November 16, will be at Tampa, Fla.

Norman Thomas Assails 3 Parties

Reading, Pa., Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, today attacked both major parties and of the Union Party, said Representative William Lemke was troubled with "three messiahs."

"The Republicans," he charged, "offer you a jumble of conclusions. They offer you a chance to go back to the 'Old Deal.' They have no program at all.

"The Democrats are playing the role of labor, but in Arkansas they don't even pretend to be friendly to labor."

He then switched his attack to Lemke and the Union Party, charging that the Representative is responsible to "three messiahs."

"The three messiahs," Thomas said, "are Father Charles E. Coughlin, anti-Semite priest; the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, the Fascist forerunner, and Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the well-meaning medicine man.

State Takes Over Trial of 'Kidnapers'

San Francisco, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—The attorney general's staff looked tonight to the kidnaping trial of 12 asserted vigilantes as the first practical test of a new constitutional provision authorizing the attorney general to take direct charge of cases where county authorities have failed to act.

Deputy attorneys general examined asserted victims who were tarred, feathered, beaten and reviled, preparatory to filing new complaints against the 12 who were held for trial after a preliminary hearing Friday at nearby Santa Rosa.

In the preliminary hearing the prosecution depended mainly on the sensational stories of Silva M. A. Green, a sign painter; Sol Nitzberg, a rancher, and George W. Ford, alll of whom were seized and beaten by night riders avowedly seeking to prevent a strike of fruit and hop pickers last year.

Roosevelt Victory Sure, Says Farley

New York, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—Democratic Chairman James A. Farley said tonight that "President Roosevelt's election is assured and if the present trend continues we shall witness a remarkable landslide."

"I am of the firm belief," he said, "that we shall come out better than we did in 1932, when all but six States marched behind the Roosevelt banner on election day."

Farley's prediction was made in a statement summing up the impression he gained from a series of conferences at Democratic headquarters with party leaders of 41 States. Leaders from the other seven States will confer with Farley this week.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

RAPID CITY, S. Dak., Aug. 30. Although the existing drought in the great plains has been overdramatized in some respects, the immediate prospect is not as hopeless as some New Dealers would have us believe. This catastrophe has had the inevitable value of concentrating attention on the serious deterioration of one of the Nation's great natural reservoirs which has been going on for a century or more.

WALTMAN.

Even though it is tinged with a political flavor, President Roosevelt's tour of these drought-seared plains, for the day at least, is serving the laudable purpose of making the country conscious of the ramifications of what is happening here, the magnitude of the problem and the urgent necessity for scientific, intelligent and prompt action on a broad scale.

And yet, with human nature what it is—not much different here than in the stock brokerage offices of Wall Street—this very section, as well as the country as a whole, promptly would forget about this problem if next year heavy rains soaked these plains.

Indeed, the magnitude and difficulty of achieving any worthwhile, permanent project in rehabilitating this area from the malignant disease which eats at its vitals is illustrated by the attitude of the people who live next to the problem and suffer at its hands.

For the most part they refuse to believe that there is anything organically wrong with their countryside. "Give us rains next year—and the year after that and we will be all right," they plaintively assert, and pitifully protest against any suggestion that the population of the area should be shifted or adjusted in order to eliminate some of the difficulties.

Even though their crops fail and they must give up their cattle and go on Federal relief rolls, they cheerfully talk about what would happen if they had rain. Some appear impressed by the sermons of "better land use" and water conservation being preached to them—but most of them would forget all about that should next year's crop come forth in abundance. They are gamblers and speculators with nature as much as any Wall Streeter is in stocks and bonds.

Thus, as always, the element of human nature will prove to be the most stubborn in dealing with the problem of the great plains. Although the drought of 1934 and this year has given the New Deal an opportunity to make more progress in getting an understanding of that problem and in setting in motion remedial plans, none of those plans are original with the brain trust, except for refining details.

Soil conservation, the planting of trees, the construction of dams and other water reserves irrigation projects and crop insurance in the form of an ever-normal granary have been preached throughout this country for many years—with little effect because of the indifference of a large number of those most vitally affected by such schemes.

They have been warned of the disastrous results of what they were doing and yet, with the exception of the larger and more intelligent operators, they have gone on depleting the soil, planting wheat on land which should have been used only for grazing, overcropping and overgrazing land when prices were good and nature favorable and ignoring the necessities of a drought year.

Thus, the first task in rehabilitating these plains is that of educating the people who live on them to the problem—and that is a long, dreary and unspectacular procedure. It is easier to live for the year and let the future take care of itself. But until it is done little real progress can be made toward halting deterioration.

But the misuse of the prairie land con not be attributed alone to the greed and stupidity of man. The Federal Government must assume part of the responsibility. There now appears general agreement that the terms of the homestead act of 1862 was a tragic error—that they contributed more to deterioration of this region than extensive cropping during the World War period.

President Roosevelt's great plains drought area committee reported to him that "the Federal homestead policy, which kept land allotments low and required that a portion of each should be plowed, is now seen to have caused immeasurable harm."

The committee went on to point out that the 1862 act, "limiting an individual holding to 160 acres, was on the Western plains a stimulus to overcultivation, and, for that matter, almost an obligatory vow of poverty."

Removal of farm families from land that should never have been used for anything except grazing to more humid valley land is one solution of the problem—but it is one in which the Federal Government must be willing to spend millions of dollars and to lend much more.

The farmer confronted by starvation and dependent on Federal largesse undoubtedly will co-operate in such a movement. But once the severity of the present drought passes it is doubtful whether most of these farmers will consent to being pushed about by the Federal Government. Indeed a process of starvation, it would appear, is almost essential to success for such rehabilitation plans.

The people in this area have become quite suspicious of proposals to relocate them or to "adjust their economy," as it is more euphemistically put. In the first place most of these people love the country in which they live. Secondly, the adjacent townspeople become alarmed at such proposals because their livelihood depends on the farmers of the plains.

President Roosevelt has repeatedly denied that the Federal Government has any intention of depopulating any part of the area. Yet his drought committee has reached the conclusion that "the basic cause of the present great plains situation is an attempt to impose upon the region a system of agriculture to which the plains are not adapted—to bring into a semi-arid region methods which, on the whole, are suitable only for a humid region."

If this means anything it means that there must be a reformation of agricultural methods with a consequent shifting of population. Indeed, the committee hinted at this objective when it pointed out the necessity for knowledge concerning the extent of population which could be "relocated with advantage to itself" and went on to assert that "in the long run a transfer from cropping to grazing would undeniably reduce the population of such areas." The committee dodged meeting the question whether the region could adequately support its present population.

But it pointed out that a sounder agricultural policy affording a better income and standard of living "might increase subsidiary opportunities for employment" and it held that fundamentally the purpose must be "not to depopulate the region but to make it permanently inhabitable."

Yet the populace is suspicious, and justifiably so. A government which made the mistakes of the homestead act can hardly claim infallibility or omniscience.

Mussolini Alarms Paris and London

London, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—British diplomats tonight believed Premier Mussolini's declaration that he sees no end to the European armaments race will "further surcharge the delicate European situation" and reduce the prospect for success of the Locarno conference in October. It had been hoped that at Locarno efforts to limit armaments, especially in the air, could be renewed.

Il Duce's assertion that 8,000,000 Italians can be mobilized within a few hours also worried the British, whose position in the Mediterranean already has been challenged by Italy, and probably will strengthen their determination to accelerate Britain's rearmament.

Mussolini's reference to "dubious political combinations" was regarded as an allusion to the Franco-Soviet-Czech entente, and was viewed as an indication Mussolini now shares Adolf Hitler's antagonism to that alignment. The British believe German-Italian co-operation will be reinforced after the trouble in Spain quiets down.

France to Speed Arming.

Paris, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—Neutral observers expressed the opinion tonight Premier Mussolini's statement Italy could mobilize 8,000,000 men in a few hours would speed up France's military preparations.

The French fear an increasing danger from Germany as the result of Chancellor Hitler's lengthening of the Reich's compulsory military service term from one to two years.

Officials declined to comment on Il Duce's declaration.

Nationalists pictured France as sandwiched in between the giant armies of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

French troops, meanwhile, were engaged in maneuvers near the Franco-Italian border in southeastern France. The exercises will continue until mid-September.

A polish military mission was received in France tonight amid acclaim by the press which heralded the event as an indication German rearmament had driven Poland back into the arms of France.

Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly, inspector general of the Polish army, headed the visitors, who were feted both at Belfort on the border and in Paris.

During his week's visit, Gen. Rydz-Smigly will be shown the cream of French troops in one of the most elaborate military tours arranged for a foreign dignitary since the World War.

Police Still Searching For Missing Girl, 15

Marie, according to her father, C. L. Sharpe, Labor Department employe, appeared "disconsolate" before she disappeared. Sharpe said he thought his daughter had a quarrel with her boy friend.

Landon Rests, Awaits Meeting With Roosevelt

G. O. P. Nominee Relaxes at Home of Friends After Trip East.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 30.—Gov. Alf. M. Landon passed the weekend before his drought conference with President Roosevelt relaxing at the nearby country home of one of his closest political advisers, Lacy Haynes.

Aids reported rest from his recent strenuous Eastern campaign drive the major purpose of the nominee's visit to the Haynes Bonner Springs home. But observers noted that the trip afford Landon an opportunity, if he chose, to talk over with Haynes Thursday's meeting at Des Moines with his Democratic opponent for the Presidency.

Haynes, Kansas manager for the Kansas City Star, was active in the preconvention drive for Landon's nomination. He was a member of the Governor's official party in the Eastern swing which ended Thursday night.

Will Attend as Governor.

Members of the Landon camp said the Republican candidate would go to Des Moines strictly as Governor of Kansas. They represented him as feeling that the conference was Mr. Roosevelt's and consequently would be guided by the Chief Executive. Landon, they said, while a Presidential candidate, would attend on no different basis from the Governors of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Indicative of this approach, some Republican officials said, was Landon's selection of aids for the drought meeting. So far he has designated Prof. L. E. Call and W. E. Grimes, of Kansas State College, to accompany him.

There was a possibility, too, that Dean Harry Umberger, of the same institution, would join the party. All three have served on State drought committees in Kansas and are regarded as specialists in agricultural problems and farm economics.

Plans Drought Work.

Before departing for Des Moines Landon planned more work on the Kansas drought situation. He has reviewed conditions since his return from the East, and officials forecast a new step tomorrow in the effort to put emergency freight rates on feeds in drought areas on a joint basis.

They explained that while reductions now are effective on individual roads, the carriers had not agreed to a joint scale so that drought-stricken farmers buying feeds shipped over two roads could get the benefit of the cuts.

With his next campaign trip, a tour of Middle Western farm areas, projected for late September, some aids thought it likely the Governor would travel from Des Moines to Estes Park, Colo., for a brief visit with his family on his summer ranch before returning to his Topeka office.

Fall Governors' Parley to Study Security Plans

Taxes Also Will Occupy Important Place in November Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

In the comparatively placid atmosphere of a post-Presidential campaign, State Governors late this fall jointly will ponder over such problems as social security and taxes.

Cary A. Hardee, secretary of the Governors' conference, yesterday placed high on the list of subjects to be considered at the November 16-18 meeting the matter of fitting the Federal social security program to State administration.

Hardee, former Governor of Florida, said he had noted indications of widespread interest by State chief executives in the social security program. John G. Winant, chairman of the Federal Social Security Board, Hardee said, will be invited to address the Governors on the operation of the program which he directs.

With national and State political campaign debate of the question ended by the time the conference meeting date rolls around, the matter of taxation was considered likely to be given prominent place on the conference agenda.

Overlapping Taxes Included.

Of particular interest was the problem of conflicting taxation under which tax fields sometimes are levied upon by both State and Federal governments or by two State governments.

The question already has been given detailed attention by State Legislators' organizations. The Federal law-making machinery has taken cognizance of the problem by naming a special congressional committee to make a study.

Hardee said the Governors also might direct their attention to the possibility of enacting uniform State traffic and safety laws.

Although the program remains to be worked out, Hardee said he expected "splendid attendance" at this year's session. "It will be after the election," he remarked, "and I imagine most of the Governors will enjoy getting away for the trip."

St. Louis Likely Choice.

Tentative plans call for opening sessions of the conference to be held at St. Louis and the final meetings at Jefferson City, Missouri's capital.

The meeting this year will find an executive committee membership which includes Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee. Other members of the committee include Governors Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, Dave Sholtz of Florida, Henry Horner of Illinois, and Harry Nice of Maryland. Officials said they did not know whether Gov. Landon would attend this year's meeting.

The conference of Governors was first called by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1903, primarily to consider questions of conservation and uniform State laws. An organization was affected that year and the conference has met regularly since.

Huge Army Ready, Duce Says

Socialist government and a revolting, Fascist army.

But he did speak of "certain political situations which now are in the course of uncertain developments."

Consequently, he told the hushed throng, Italy's watchword must be "strength."

As for Italy's momentous past 12 months, embracing the conquest of Africa's last independent kingdom and the rebirth of Italian empire, Il Duce predicted:

"The influence of their events will be felt more in the course of time."

Thousands were packed into the municipal square as Mussolini, in his usual uniform of a Fascist corporal, spoke from the city hall.

Near him stood his young son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano; Marshal Pietro Badoglio, conqueror of Addis Ababa, and Gen. Emilio de Bono, in command at the start of the Ethiopian campaign.

Behind him on the hills were traced in enormous letters "D U X" and "R E X" (Duce and King).

Crowd Stands Hours.

Mussolini spoke in the early evening, but just after noon the crowd began to gather in the square, to stand for five or six hours awaiting the dictator's words.

Following is the text of Mussolini's address:

Officers, non-commissioned officers, soldiers, Black Shirts and people of Irpinia:

Listen to me while I speak to you and to the Italian people.

The grand maneuvers of the fourteenth year of Fascism have ended. They have developed, from the first to the last day, in an atmosphere vibrant with enthusiasm.

The generous hospitality of the Irpinian people has enveloped the participating units in its atmosphere.

Your fervent patriotism and your dedication to the regime make you worthy, oh, comrades of Irpinia, of having had take place in your magnificent territory the grand maneuvers of the first year of Fascist empire.

Tomorrow on the plains of Volturara, before His Majesty Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia, will pass over 60,000 men, 200 tanks, 400 mighty cannon, 400 mortars, 3,000 machine guns and 2,800 armored cars.

This aggregation of men and means is imposing, but it represents at most a modest and almost insignificant total in comparison to the total of men and means on which Italy can surely count.

I invite Italians to take absolutely to heart this declaration of mine.

Not despite the African war but as a consequence of the African war all the armed forces of Italy today are more efficient than ever.

We always, in the course of a few hours and after a simple order, can mobilize 8,000,000 men.

It is a formidable bloc which 14 years of Fascist regime have prepared at a white heat which demanded sacrifice.

The Italian people should know their internal peace and that abroad will be protected, and with it, the peace of the world.

With the most crushing of victories in one of the most just of wars, Italy, with war in Africa, has acquired an immense, rich, imperial territory, where for many decades she will be able to carry out the achievements of her labors and of her creative ability.

For this reason, but not only for this reason, will we reject the absurdity of eternal peace, which is foreign to our creed and to our temperament.

Seeks Long Peace.

We desire to live a long time at peace with all: we are determined to offer our lasting, concrete, contribution to the project of collaboration among peoples.

But after the catastrophic failure of the Disarmament Conference, in the face of an armaments' race already under way and irresistible from this time on, and in the face of certain political situations which now are in the course of uncertain developments, the order of the day for Italians, for Fascist Italians, can be only this:

We must be strong. We must be always stronger. We must be so strong that we can face any eventualities and look directly in the eye whatever may befall.

To this supreme, categorical principle must be subordinated and will be subordinated all the life of the nation.

The conquest of empire was not obtained by compromises on the table of diplomacy.

It was obtained by fine, glorious and victorious battle, fought with the spirit which has bent enormous material difficulties and an almost universal coalition of nations.

It is the spirit of the Black Shirt revolution, the spirit of this Italy, the spirit of this populous Italy, warlike and vigilant on sea, on land and in the heavens.

It is the spirit which I have seen shining in the eyes of the soldiers who have maneuvered in these past days, the spirit we shall see shine when King and country shall call them.

Since the maneuvers last year, 12 months have passed; 12 months only—but how many events, how much history, has passed in these 12 months.

They have been rich in events, the influence of which is felt today, but which will be felt still more in the course of time.

Before concluding this meeting I ask you:

Were old accounts settled?

(The crowd shouted "Yes.")

And have we marched straight ahead up to now?

(The crowd: "Yes.")

I tell you, I promise you, we shall do likewise tomorrow and always.

Flaming Plane Lands on Beach Amid Picnickers; 1 Dead, 3 Hurt

Persons on Outing Near Long Island Sound Felled as Two Fliers Are Forced to Land Burning Craft; Airmen Unhurt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—A private plane crashed in flames in the midst of a group of Sunday picnickers today at Ferris Point, Long Island Sound, killing one woman and injuring three other persons.

The plane was destroyed by the fire, but two occupants escaped injury.

Sylvia Salmi, 29, of New York, was killed.

The injured: Olive Holm, 29; Helen Salmi, 36, and Henry Salmi, 36, all of New York.

In the plane were Herbert S. Ross, a commercial pilot, and Robert Bequist, a student flier. It was not learned immediately which one was piloting the plane.

The plane seemed to develop motor trouble as it swung over the beach on the north shore of the sound. Several picnicking parties were on the beach.

Suddenly a burst of flame enveloped the plane's motor. The pilot circled about looking for a place to land, but apparently found no other open stretch but the Ferris Point beach.

Flames spread back toward the occupants of the ship as it swooped into a group of eight prsons, bowling them over like ten pins. It came to a stop, the killed and injured under it, and the two occupants jumped out just before flames swept over the entire machine.

Swope Chooses 101 to Conduct Welfare Drive

They Will Seek Support of Voluntary Services in Fall Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—Gerard Swope, chairman of the 1936 Mobilization for Human Needs, tonight made public the names of 101 members of the national citizens committee which will back campaigns for support of voluntary welfare services in 330 American cities this autumn.

The committee members are to attend the national conference at Washington next month.

Vice chairmen of the committee include D. F. Kelly, of Chicago; Charles Francis Adams, of Boston, and Mortimer Fleischhacker, of San Francisco.

Other members outside New York City include:

Chester I. Barnard and Edward D. Duffield, of Newark; M. W. Clement, Thomas S. Gates and Edward Hopkinson, jr., all of Philadelphia; Vance C. McCormick, of Harrisburg, Pa.; Mrs. Frederic M. Paist, of Wayne, Pa.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Cary T. Grayson, William Green, Harry L. Hopkins, Katharine F. Lenroot, Eugene Meyer, Dr. Thomas Parran, Secretary Perkins and John G. Winant, all of Washington, D. C.; James B. Forgan and Fred K. Hoehler, of Chicago; Alfred Bettman, William J. Schroder and Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati; M. J. Cleary and Otto H. Falk, of Milwaukee; Mrs. Margaret Culkin Banning, of Duluth.

John D. Biggers, of Toledo; Dr. R. C. Buerki, of Madison, Wis.; H. G. Dalton and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland; H. W. Hoover, of Canton, Ohio; Robert Lazarus, of Columbus; Fred Hoke, of Indianapolis.

Frank B. Kellogg, of St. Paul; Gerard S. Nollen, of Des Moines; Beatty B. Williams, of Mount Vernon, Ohio; James McEvoy, of Detroit; A. W. Robertson and William P. Witherow, of Pittsburgh.

Tom K. Smith, the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, Walter W. Head and the Rev. John J. Butler, of St. Louis; Joseph F. Porter, of Kansas City; W. L. Clayton, of Houston; William Allen White, of Emporia, Kans.; Howard Bruce, of Baltimore; James B. Black and William H. Corcker, of San Francisco; Mrs. Herbert Hoover; Robert G. Sproul, of Berkeley; James R. Page and Harry J. Bauer, of Los Angeles; Frank T. Griffith and E. B. McNaughton, of Portland, Oreg.

Paris Newsman Slain By Rebels, Say Reports

Hendaye, France, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—The correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph (British) News Agency today received reports that Guy de Traversee, correspondent of the Paris newspaper Intransigeant, had been executed by Spanish rebels in Mallorca.

Paris, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—The editor of Intransigeant today said he feared "something serious" had happened to Guy de Traversee, the newspaper's correspondent in Mallorca. He said he had heard nothing from Traversee for more than a week.

Three Are Slain In Fight; Posse Hunts Suspects

Two Officers, Sea Captain Shot; Californians Hint Lynching.

By the Associated Press.

Yreka, Calif., Aug. 30.—Two law enforcement officers and a maritime pilot were shot to death at Horse Creek, isolated mining settlement near here, today in a battle with two prospectors who fled before a rapidly growing mob apparently bent on lynching.

Deputy Sheriff Martin Lange, Constable Joe Clark and Fred Seaborn, 50, a civilian pilot at the Mare Island Navy Yard, were shot as they attempted to arrest John H. Bright, 35, and Coke T. Bright, 30, brothers.

The Brights vanished in the wilds of Horse Creek Canyon, on buckbrush covered mountain slopes 35 miles out of Yreka as a posse of officials reinforced by angry citizens started after them.

Yreka, scene of the lynching a year ago of Clyde Johnson, a robber, was virtually deserted as many of its 2,200 residents deployed over the mountain wilds in the manhunt.

The posse, consisting of Sheriff George Chandler, and five deputies with two bloodhounds, trailed the brothers to Bull Meadows, at the head of Horse Creek, not far from the Oregon line.

Posse members said the Brights were armed with two rifles. The boulders and buckbrush made ideal hiding places for them and the posse moved carefully, seeking to cut off their avenue of escape into Oregon.

Charles Baker, friend of Seaborn and survivor of the bloody battle, said the trouble started when he and the three victims attempted to take the Brights into custody on an assault charge.

"We came upon the Brights as they slept beside Horse Creek," said Baker. "Lange threw back the covers on John Bright, showed his star and told him he was under arrest.

"John Bright started struggling. Lange hit him over the head with his nightstick.

"Coke Bright leaped from his bed with a rifle. He shot Constable Clark through the back as Clark started to aid Lange.

"One of the brothers then hit Lange on the head with a rifle and shot him twice. Then Seaborn, who was not mixing in the battle, was shot down."

Titulescu May Get London Portfolio

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—Diplomatic sources tonight said they believed Nicholas Titulescu, ousted as foreign minister in a shake-up of the Rumanian cabinet yesterday, would be offered the post of Minster to London.

Cap Martin, France, Aug. 30 (A.P.).—Nicholas Titulescu was reported seriously ill of a malarial fever here tonight. Physicians attending the 53-year-old statesman said his temperature rose during the day. He had expressed annoyance last night at his dismissal from the Rumanian government.

Arlington Tops Counties of U.S. In 4-Year Boom

$2,780,000 Sewage System Is Chiefly Responsible, Hanrahan Asserts.

Arlington County has led all counties in the United States in development during the past four years, County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan said yesterday.

Rapidly shaping itself into a metropolis, the county, one of the smallest in the Nation, entered upon the county manager form of local government in 1932. This form of local government is rapidly gaining popularity in many sections of the United States.

Boasting four bridges entering the Nation's Capital, Arlington County, according to Hanrahan, has citizens belonging to practically every nation in the world.

More than 80 per cent of the country's population, Hanrahan estimated, is composed of Government employes.

Sewage Biggest Aid.

It is due largely to the installation of a county-wide sewage system that the county has made its rapid growth, Hanrahan claimed. The system cost $2,780,000.

Contract for the project was signed January 4, 1934, by the county board. The PWA loaned the county $2,500,000, which allowed a Federal grant of 30 per cent or $635,000. Since the project was begun, the total sum has been increased to $2,780,000.

Work on the system was started in July, two years ago, when Lyman M. Kelly, chairman of the county board, broke ground for the construction at Lyman Park for the Long Branch trunk line.

More than 40 miles of trunk line and 70 miles of lateral line pipe have been submerged in Arlington County.

The work now is complete but for a disposal plant in the vicinity of Four Mile Run. The plant will cost $218,059.

Taking the lead in the United States, James A. Moffett, retiring head of the Federal Housing Administration, last year broke ground at Fort Myer Heights for the largest single development in the county's history—a unit of 278 apartments, later known as Colonial Village.

Since that time, a second unit now is nearing completion. This unit will provide an additional 460 apartments.

Records in the office of County Engineer C. L. Kinnier show that during 1934 a total of 244 permits were issued for the construction of new homes, costing $998,665. There were also 34 permits for business property costing $90,408.

746 Home Permits.

Last year, records show, 746 permits for new homes costing $5,723,230, and 57 permits for business property costing $227,580, were issued.

So far this year there have been 703 permits issued for new homes to cost $2,398,498. Forty-eight permits for business property have been issued.

Indications are that this year's permits will exceed those of 1934.

In addition to leading all counties in the United States in growth, Arlington heads 100 counties in the State in education.

Population of the county today is 38,000. Officials perdict a 12,000 rise in residents before three more years have passed.

Vast Trade Upturn Forecast by Chiang

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Canton, China, Aug. 30.—When China's political situation has been stabilized, trade expansion will know no limit, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, one of the world's most inaccessible figures, said in an interview today.

China's dictator, sitting in the grim Whampoa Military Academy, where he organized his 1927-28 victorious nationalist march northward to Shanghai and Peiping, said he had done much to stabilize the country and pave the way for trade expansion by bringing Kwantung Province into the sphere of Central government control.

"Foreign interests will share the benefits of the vast political changes we have wrought in the Southwest this summer," said the generalissimo, referring to his abolition of the autonomous Canton government without resort to arms.

1936 Season Ends At Center Camp

Center Camp for children at Chopowamsic, Va., closed its season yesterday with a record for the summer of having accommodated more than 200 needy Washington children on vacations ranging from 19 days to one month.

No serious illness was reported during the season. The 200 children averaged a gain of from 4 to 6 pounds each while at the camp.

Children were recommended to the camp by the Jewish Social Service Agency, the Jewish Foster Home, the Fifty Club, the Child Guidance Agency, and the Friendship and Nye Houses.

Cornell Awards Won by 2 Youths

Award of 2 of 24 McMullen Regional Scholarships in Engineering at Cornell University to young men from the Maryland-Virginia district was announced yesterday by President Livingston Farrand of Cornell.

The two who gained the honor are Thomas Arthur Schultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Schultz, jr., of Baltimore, and Henry A. Orrick 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Orrick, jr., of the same city. Both are graduates of Baltimore Polytechnic Institute.

The district chairman upon whose recommendation the scholarships were awarded is Creed W. Fulton, of 1700 I street northwest.

Soviet Embargoes Arms.

Moscow, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Formalizing its agreement with France, the Soviet Union today banned the export or re-export to Spain and Spanish possessions of all kinds of arms, munitions, airplanes and airplane parts. Great Britain, France, Portugal, Germany and Italy preceded the Soviet Union in formally applying arms embargoes against Spain.

Dr. Smith's National Training School Revolution Begins to Show Results

Under the leadership of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith (above) superintendent of the National Training School for Girls, the once dingy reform institution on Conduit road is undergoing a complete transformation. Nurse Catherine Ann Sullivan (above, right) is working in a medical examination room that used to be a dark cell where inmates of the place slept. The WPA is turning ugly, forbidding buildings into attractive, homelike living quarters such as that at the right.

to church at 11 a. m., and the local committee on arrangements acceded to his wishes in that respect. Borglum's ultimatum was that the unveiling would take place before noon, even if the President could not be there until 2:30 p. m., Mountain time.

A compromise was reached this morning when Borglum, a stormy petrel in art circles, agreed to term the first unveiling a few minutes before noon a "test" for the benefit of photographers and to go through the scheduled ceremony when the President arrived.

Borglum made a brief address to the President and high ranking South Dakota officials, outlining the program, pointed out that 400,000 tons of stone had been blasted out of the mountain side to create the Jefferson likeness and finally called on the President to dedicate the memorial as a national shrine where Americans 100,000 years hence might come and be reminded of the founders of their Government and the democratic idea.

Miss Mary Alice Borglum, daughter of the sculptor, stepped to a platform and waved a small American flag in the direction of the mountain top. Suddenly, before Jefferson's face, was a blast of dynamite and a crash of falling rock and then another blast, sending up clouds of smoke and stone dust.

A giant boom slowly swung around, folding back the 70-foot American flag which covered Jefferson's face, revealing on the nose of the founding father a workman, appearing about the size of a bird. A moment later there were lowered flags of Spain and of the French Bourbon dynasty, symbolizing the Louisiana purchase by Jefferson. On top of the figure of Jefferson was raised the Jefferson flag—containing but 15 stars and 15 stripes.

Text of Address.

By the Associated Press.

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 30.—Here is the text of President Roosevelt's informal address today in which he dedicated the figure of Thomas Jefferson at Mount Rushmore National Memorial:

I think, my friends, that there are two people who told me about this in the early days—one of them was Mr. Borglum and the other was Senator Norbeck.

On many occasions, when a new project is presented to you on paper and then, later on, you see the accomplishment, you are disappointed, but it is just the opposite of that in what we are looking at now. I had seen photographs, I had seen the drawings and I had talked with those who are responsible for this great work, and yet I had had no conception until about ten minutes ago not only of its magnitude but of its permanent beauty and of its permanent importance.

Mr. Borglum has well said that this can be a monument and an inspiration for the continuance of the democratic-republican form of government, not only in our own beloved country but, we hope, throughout the world.

This is the second dedication. There will be others by other Presidents in other years. When we get through, there will be something for the American people that will last through not just generations, but for thousands and thousands of years, and I think that we can perhaps mediate a little on those Americans ten thousand years from now when the weathering on the faces of Washington and Jefferson and Lincoln shall have proceeded to perhaps a depth of a tenth of an inch—meditate and wonder what our descendants, and I think they will still be here, will think about us.

Let us hope that at least they will give up the benefit of the doubt—that they will believe we have honestly striven every day and generation to preserve for descendants a decent land to live in and a decent form of government to operate under.

I am very glad to have come here today informally. It is right and proper that I should have come informally because we do not want formalities where nature is concerned.

What we have done so far exemplifies what I have been talking about in the last few days—cooperation with nature and not fighting with nature.

I am happy to congratulate all of you not only on what we see today, but on what is going to happen in the future at Mount Rushmore.

Training School Girls Now Do Own Shopping With Brass 'Money' They Earn Themselves

Inmates of the National Training School for Girls went shopping yesterday for the second time in a month with money they'd earned themselves.

As soon as they had cleared away the luncheon dishes the 21 residents of the institution out on Conduit road were permitted to visit a big basement room fitted up like a country store. There they bought calico prints for new dresses, tried on shoes, selected hats and face powder and, in general, carried on very much like young women shoppers along F and Seventh streets.

In exchange for their purchases they gave brass discs, the "money" they received for their work at the Training School. Each girl is paid $7 a week, but is required to return $4 for her board and room and 25 cents for health insurance.

If she's been a good girl she has at least $2.75 worth of brass discs left at the end of the week. If she's been especially well behaved and industrious she may make a few extra nickles as bonuses. But if she's impudent or lazy or disobedient, fines are collected.

Too Early for Results.

How is the whole plan working out?

"Too early to say," said the superintendent, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, last night. "Wait till they've had a few more shopping days. You can't expect these girls to adjust themselves to an entirely new sort of existence overnight. No, not even in a month. Give us six months and we'll be able to draw some definite conclusions."

The so-called new existence has only begun, she pointed out. The semimonthly shopping is merely the forerunner of things to come. Already the small dark cells where the girls used to sleep are being transformed into beauty parlors, training kitchens, sewing quarters, and classrooms where business and academic courses will be taught.

WPA workmen are tearing out partitions, enlarging windows, brightening dark walls, installing modern equipment. Soon the girls will be able to learn how to be beauticians, typists, file clerks, seamstresses, and cooks. Soon they will have attractive quarters in which to spend their leisure.

Heat, Lights Please.

What improvement interests them most? Are they excited at the thought of learning a trade or are they more pleased at the idea of picking out their own clothes? Are they happy over the new labor-saving equipment or are they more pleased over the modern plumbing being installed?

"Well, I'll tell you," chuckled Dr. Smith who has practically revolutionized the training school.

"The thing they like best is having heat and electricity in their rooms. The lights are already in and the heat will be on by the time cold weather comes. Think what that means to girls who have been used to going to bed in dark rooms without a speck of heat all winter long."

When the WPA workmen have finished their remodeling, which will probably be about Thanksgiving time, the number of inmates undoubtedly will increase, the superintendent said. She has had as many as 71, white and colored. Now she has only 21 colored ones. The Juvenile Court, she explained, is trying to make other provision for new cases while the training school is in the throes of being made over.

"We've got to do a lot more than give them comfortable and safe sleeping quarters and wholesome food," said Dr. Smith. "That's only part of our job. We've got to get across to them the idea that somebody is interested in them as human beings. Otherwise we can't expect much from them as individual members of society after they've been released from here."

The garden party Mrs. Roosevelt gave at the White House for the inmates last spring was a step toward making the girls understand that "somebody is interested in them as human beings," the superintendent explained.

"But," she added, "we can't expect them to live on the memory of that one event forever. It was valuable, but it simply fits in with the other changes in attitude and treatment we're trying to bring about."

Already, she pointed out, the salary system has been a benefit along at least one line. Formerly, some of the girls were likely to complain of being ill when there was work to be done. Now that they are paid for what they do, are fined for laziness and given bonuses for industry, their health seems to be better.

And yet, Dr. Smith explained, the salary system costs the institution nothing. The school always has had to provide the girls with dresses, tooth paste, shoes, stockings, and all the other things that they are now permitted to "buy" for themselves. Soon the "store" will lay in a supply of small decorative objects so the inmates may have the experience of fixing up their rooms to suit their own tastes—another step toward individuality.

ties excelled those in the District.

"The most remarkable aspect of this vast program is the fact that it has accomplished such tremendous results in such a short period. Everywhere I found the local WPA organizations co-operating with all social agencies in a campaign to improve social conditions and to provide the needy with the necessities of life.

"The State administrations are following the policy of spreading the WPA dollar to give the community the maximum benefit. The loafers and inefficient have been steadily weeded out so that today the WPA worker can stand favorable comparison with the average employe in private industry."

Allen said he found community interest in the WPA much keener in other cities and counties than is evident here in Washington.

"They're not tso blase as we are," he added. "In spite of the political campaign and the resulting propaganda against emergency agencies the people as a whole have not only grown used to WPA but exceedingly fond of it.

"They have gradually come to realize that this vast works program is not 'boondoggling,' or 'merely wasting the people's money,' but a great humanitarian enterprize which has brought real and lasting benefits to all.

"Of course, many mistakes have been made in the past, and a few will be made in the future. No such vast program could have been undertaken without making mistakes.

"However, WPA learns quickly and rectifies mistakes promtply. Today, this organization is slowly but surely becoming a model of efficiency. If you want to know whether WPA is generally considered worthwhile, merely suggest to any community that al such activities stop."

The commissioner taked with representative citizens of the community as well as employes on the WPA pay roll, and the answer was universally the same. They pointed with pride to the new schools, bridges, streets, sewers and airports, and testified the projects not only had taken up the slack in unemployment but had stimulated local business as well.

Allen,s trip was not all work, however, and his aids were particularly reminiscent of New Orleans and some of the cities along the route.

The tour did not include Texas and the centennial exposition, but Allen came back doubly pleased at the results of primaries during his absence. Tom Blanton had been defeated and his good friend, Pat Harrison, renominated for United States Senator.

Boy Confesses Killing Woman With a Hammer

Chicago Student Goaded to Crime by Sight of Gold, Police Told.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Roland Munroe, jr., 15-year-old high school student, early today confessed, Assistant State's Attorney Richard Levine said, the hammer slaying of Mrs. Agnes Roffeis, 65-year-old widowed invalid, who had befriended him.

Levine said the fatal beating occurred last night after young Munroe had sat for some time drinking orangeade with Mrs. Roffeis. She had proffered him the refreshment when he came to her home to collect for newspapers he delivered daily.

The motive, Levine said, was robbery, the boy believing he could sell some old gold Mrs. Roffeis had shown him.

An avid reader of crime fiction, the youth, Levine said, "was suddenly overpowered by an impulse to obtain the gold."

His Confession Quoted.

Roland's saory o fthe crime, as told to Levine and Police Capt. Martin McCormick, was as follows:

"She was sitting on the sofa, with the jewelry, which I said I could sell for her, beside her when she got up for something. She stumbled and fell flat on the floor.

"Just while she lay there the thought went through my mind that if I knocked her out I could get all the jewelry and have the money for myself.

"I struck her twice on the head with the hammer (which the boy told the police he had been using to straighten a key for Mrs. Roffeis). The third time I missed and the hammer hit the floor and broke. Then I took her cane and hit her five or six times with the crooked part. I used both hands.

"Didn't Think She Was Dead."

"She didn't move, so I went into the kitchen and got a coil of wire I saw there. I put some around her neck.

"I didn't think she was dead. I wiped the blood off her face. Then I got to thinking I'd better get out of there. I washed my hands—just shaking off the water.

"I took the jewelry in the box and went. At the Montrose Beach I washed my shirt, which had blood on it. I took the jewelry out of the box, which I threw away."

Roland then told the police he went to the home of Clarence Miller a dealer in old gold, where he wanted to sell the jewelry. Miller had gone to bed, so the boy left the gold with Mrs. Miller, where the police recovered it.

Mrs. Roffeis' body was discovered by a roomer. Roland was identified by several passersby, who unknowingly had seen the boy in the room while the slaying was committed.

Munroe's statement was made after he had been questioned most of the night at the Rogers Park Police Station.

Believed Crime Perfect.

Devine said the youth apparently believed he had commited the "perfect crime," and parried all questions at first, but that he was finally led into his admissions by his own suggestion to his questioners that "I suppose you found my fingerprints on the hammer."

The son of a dealer in old coins, Munroe was a first-year student at Senn High School and a regular attendant at church and Sunday school.

When asked if he was sorry, the youth was quoted as saying:

"I didn't intend to kill her, you know. I didn't believe she was dead for a long time after they told me. I don't think they'll convict me though because of my age. I'm too young."

Devine said the lad admitted that he and another boy whose name he declined to tell, planned to burglarize Mrs. Roffeis' home two weeks ago.

Power Parley Delegates Will Sound Warning

Will Urge Caution to Keep Economic System in Adjustment.

A warning that caution must be exercised throughout the world in the further development and use of power lest the economic system be thrown out of adjustment will be sounded here next week by delegates to the Third World Power Conference.

Convinced that the world is at the beginning of power boom, Dr. Harlow S. Person, economist, has prepared a paper for the conference in which he declares that the benefits of the boom can be widely enjoyed only through lowering of rates, brought about by increased consumption.

"Excess rigidity in the price structure must be eliminated to achieve the balance in the economic system necessary for progress," the economist says. He adds that "inflated debt burdens must be liquidated and higher real wages offered."

Although all 52 nations to be represented at the conference are prepared to report an increase in power, many of the delegates intend tto point out that this condition will not necessarily lead to increased unemployment.

In the opinion of Hungarian experts, for instance, coal mine economy will result in better economic conditions and in more employment in their country. A paper by an Englishman notes that the increasing use of power and the tendency to automatic control of machinery has brought about a decrease of 182,000 operatives in the last ten years. During the same time, however, it has caused an increase in the employment of clerical and technical workers by 102,000.

The increased use of power will be brought about, the engineer delegates believe, through the penetration of rural areas, the development of as yet unheard-of devices, lowered rates as a result of greater efficiency of production, and the increased use of electricty rather than steam by industry and by railroads.

Dr. Person will point out that the power industry has many problems of adjustment yet to solve. He is convinced that the coal industry is based on peonage of labor, and that the oil and gas industry is based on rapid exploitation of limited resources, that much water power is going unused, that unification and interconnection of utility systems has been limited and that electric service has not been extended in most rural areas.

Engineers coming to the conference are predicting that the consumption of electricity will increase as rapidly in the next 15 years as it has in the last 15. Much of that expansion will be in the rural areas.

At the present the industry in the United States is unequaled in volume of production and unsurpassed in techniques of conversion and utilization, according to Dr. Person. He believes this is accounted for by the large freedom of private enterprise and the abundance and variety of resources and foreign and domestic demand.

Alcazar Rebels' 38-Day Defense Is Nearing End

Besieged Month, 2,000 in Famous Building Face Almost Sure Doom.

(At the scene of action, a member of the Associated Press foreign staff has written this graphic story of the weeks-long siege of the famous Alcazar, which crowns the heights of Toledo.—Editor's note.)

By Alexander H. Uhl.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Toledo, Spain, Aug. 30.—The crumbling northern wall of Toledo's famous Alcazar, once the fortified residence of Moorish and Castilian monarchs, bore stark evidence today of the desperate strength of nearly 2,000 rebels entrenched inside.

Day after day, two powerful field pieces have been driving hundreds of 6-inch shells into the northern face of the building, smashing it slowly to dust.

But for 38 days government troops have been unable to dislodge the rebels.

Now the inner wall has been pierced. The structure appears doomed.

No less than 600 shells have been fired thus far and there is every indication that should the bombardment continue much longer, the Alcazar will be split in two.

Refuge Underground.

The rebels have taken refuge in underground passages. Only occasionally, during the shelling, do angry spats of bullets give evidence of vicious sniping from the side of the besieged.

Two wings of the building, with their pairs of twin towers, are as yet untouched, but nearby government forces are beginning to attack them. Even now, shells are beginning to plunge into the central courtyard.

The Government aim must be accurate, for the slightest miscalculation in range of direction would plump the shells into the city of Toledo itself, where government infantrymen are on guard day and night behind emplacements of sandbags and barbed wire, near every exit of the building where the rebel defenders have been resisting siege for 38 days.

One artillery officer who dropped nine shells into the government arms factory nearby received a summary court-martial which cut short his career.

Citizens Watch Firing.

Back on the hills, scores of government militia and spectators watch the course of every shell and cheer with delight when a bull's-eye is scored. In the city itself the citizens have become so certain of the battery's marksmanship that they watch the shelling every afternoon as though at an exposition.

Within a day or two, the government expectes to install a 24-centimeter piece to batter down the walls more quickly, before rebel relief can arrive from the west.

Girl Is Rebel Heroine.

San Sebastian, Spain, Aug. 30 (AP). A young Dutch girl, reports published here today said, lies in Castillo del Monjuich Hospital at Barcelona, boasting she mowed down "dozens of rebels" with her machine gun on the Aragon front.

Dispatches to the newspaper Frente Popular said Fernanda Schoonhert, newest heroine of the Catalan government forces, was recuperating after 16 days of fighting, resting in a room heaped with red flowers which were presented to her by Leftst organizations and admirers.

"I killed dozens of rebels with my own machine gun and took two prisoners myself in my first battle in Aragon," the dispatches quoted her as saying.

"I was the captain of a girl's machine gun corps which fought ten hours without a break."

Went to Barcelona.

"I went to Barcelona at the outbreak of the revolution and enlisted in the machine gun corps," she continued, according to the dispatches.

"After three days of fighting they sent us up front.

"All we girls were excited.

"A few stayed in the rear ranks, but most of us went up to the front line, for we wanted to show the men we were with them.

"They needed our machine guns, too."

"This is a piece of a bomb from a rebel plane," she explained.

"It started to bombard our column, led by Col. Rel Bario, and tried to hit the last truck, which was loaded with dynamite. It missed.

"If it had hit it, I wouldn't even be in the hospital."

A doctor said she was suffering from exhaustion.

der orders, presumably, to relieve the Oklahoma, which had gone to Europe with midshipmen from Annapolis. The midshipmen, previously had been transferred to other warships. The Oklahoma, however, still is cruising around the Spanish coast and has not started for home.

The Kane is a "flush deck" destroyer, completed in 1919. She carries 122 officers and men. She is a ship of 1,190 tons displacement, 314 feet in length, and carries the following armament, besides anti-aircraft guns—four 5-inch guns, one 3-inch gun and 12 torpedo tubes. It is believed that besides the regular crew there were aboard a number of Coast Guard men transferred from the Cayuga.

Commanding the Kane is Lieut. Comdr. J. D. Alvis, of New Orleans.

Other officers listed in the ship's roster are: Lieut. Spencer A. Carlson, of Oregon, executive officer Lieut. E. D. Crowley, of Nebraska, engineer; Lieut. (junior grade) M. D. Fairchild, of Kentucky, gun officer; Ensign W. E. Baranowski, of Wisconsin; Ensign J. P. Craft, jr., of Georgia, communications officer.

The Kane and the Hatfield were off Delaware when they were ordered to Spain. They immediately proceeded to New York before sailing for Europe. Both are fast boats, capable of making 35 knots.

History

despite the fact that yellow fever was decimating their crews.

Such was the condition when President Grover Cleveland sent an American naval force to Rio.

Promised Protection.

Rear Admiral A. E. K. Benham, in command, told captains of American merchantment to go to the piers and trust him to protect them. The skipper of the bark Amy gave notice that he would take his ship into a pier the next day. Da Gama, hearing of this, proclaimed that he would fire on any vessel that tried.

The Amy started in, and from one of Da Gama's war vessels came a warning musket shot. The American cruiser Detroit thereupon sent a ball hurling across the bow of the Brazilian, and followed it with another that struck her side.

Seeing two Brazilian tugs maneuvering as if with a purpose to ram his vessel, Commander Brownson took the Detroit in between the two Brazilian warships, and occupied a position that would have enabled him t osink them and their tugs at the same time.

This decisive action ended the affair.

The "Chesapeake-eLopard incident" involving bombardment of an American frigate by a British man o' war in 1807, caused a wave of anger to roll across the young American Republic, and had not been forgotten when the War of 1812 came.

U. S. Refused Demand.

This was in the days when the question of "impressment" was a burning one. A number of British sailors deserted and took service on the Chesapeake. A demand for their return was made by the British minister in Washington. The American Government made an investigation, but, convinced that the deserters were Americans, refused to give them up.

On June 22, 1807, as the Chesapeake st sail from Hampton Roads to relieve the Constitution in the Mediteranean, his majesty's ship Leopard, which had been lying at Lynnhaven, followed her and when well outside the jurisdiction of the United States signaled her to stop. A British officer boarded the Chesapeake and demanded the deserting sailors return with him.

Capt. James Barron, of the Chesapeake, refused to surrender the men. Thereafter, the Leopard opened fire at close range, loosing a number of broadsides. The American vessel had just undergone repairs; her powder horns were empty, rammers could not be found, matches had been mislaid and but few of her guns were mounted.

Lieut. Allen managed to discharge one of the Chesapeake's guns by means of a live coal from the galley. Meanwhile, 21 shots had struck the Chesapeake's hull, her foremast and mainmast had been carried away, the rigging had been badly cut, and three men had been killed and 18 wounded. Barron thereupon hauled down his flag. The Brtish boarding party found only one man of the Halifax's crew, for the rest had deserted before the Chesapeake sailed, but they took off three other men, all Americans.

Barron attempted to throw his ship on the British captain as a prize, but the latter, refusing to accept it, left the American vessel to find her way back to port as best she might. Barron later was court-martialed, found guilty of neglecting to clear his ship for action, and suspended for five years without pya.

Disavowal Made in 1811.

It was not until 1811 that Britain made a formal disavowal of the Leopard's actions by restoring to the United States three of the four men who had been seized. The fourth had been hanged to the yard-arm as a deserter.

In 1811 the American frigate, President, set out in search of the British frigate Guerriere, which had impressed an American passenger from an American ship. While searching for the Guerriere, the President encountered a smaller British man-o'-war, the Little Belt. Ordered to halt, the Little Belt replied with a shot.

After 15 minutes of fighting, the Little Belt surrendered. This clash further embittered feeling betwen the two countries, and helped provoke the War of 1812.

What has been described as the most "mortifying" incident in the history of the United States Navy occurred in 1800, and involved the George Washington, commanded by Capt. William Bainbridge. The George Washington was sent to the Mediterranean to carry the annual tribute to the pirates of Algiers. In order to conciliat urkey, the Dey of Algiers wished to send presents to Constantinople, and for this purpose requested the loan of the American man-of-war. Bainbridge protested, but the George Washington was anchored under the Algiers batteries in a position from which she could not escape, and the Dey threatened to declare war instantly if the request was refused.

Humiliated but helpless, Bainbridge cleared the harbor for Constantinople. This humiliation later was avenged when the Tripolitans were soundly thrashed by the young American Navy in a war in which Stephen Decatur gained undying fame.

Turner Is Hurt In Plane Crash On U.S. Flight

By the Associated Press.

Gallup, N. Mex., Aug. 30.—Col. Roscoe Turner, speed pilot, was injured and his racing plane virtually demolished when he cracked up on the Zuni Reservation, 65 miles south of here about 9 o'clock this morning. Turner, found resting at a Gallup hotel, said he was returning to Los Angeles by train later tonight.

The racing pilot, who was flying to Long Island for the Bendix Air Races, said his throttle broke, cutting out the engine and forcing him down in the rough country south of here.

Speaking from his hotel room, he said he did not know just what was the "matter with me," but that he thought he had "some busted ribs."

Asked how badly his plane was damaged, he said, "Bad enough that I'll just take the motor out and leave the rest of it there."

Turner said Zuni Indians who saw him come down came to his aid and gave him a horse which he rode 18 miles to Zuni where he secured an automobile.

Madrid Loss

remain only at their own risk, was issued tonight by the American Embassy.

It was expected a considerable number of the 150 United States nationals still in the capital will take advantage of the anticipated presence of an American warship at Alicante this week.

The text of the note declared:

"The embassy and the consulate have brought to the attention of all American citizens in Madrid on several occasions, both in writing and orally, the advisability of leaving for safety.

"The Government of the United States, at considerable expense, has made available American naval and commercial vessels to evacuate nationals.

"It is desired again to make it very clear that all Americans who remain in Spain do so at their own risk and upon their own responsibility.

"It now is thought probable an American naval vessel may be at Alicante or Valencia during the coming week, possibly Wednesday. It is possible this may be the last opportunity to leave on an American boat."

In Madrid itself, hit by air bombs 48 hours before, Anarchist and syndicalist leaders spoke out to halt "monstrous" acts by zealots within their own ranks.

The extreme Leftist workers' groups, loyal to the Socialist government, stated they were ready to "execute publicly" any rebels condemned by the popular tribunals set up to try them, but warned they will "also regard as rebels" the perpetrators of individual atrocities.

All day long, government planes dipped and wheeled over the city to prevent a repetition of Friday night's air raids in which rebel bombs, blasting the capital itself for the first time, left many wounded and tore gaping holes in historic soil.

Nervous families slept in subway stations, especially those persons living in the lower districts of the city.

Antiaircraft guns and machine guns, as well as the searchlights, were mounted at airdromes and on the roofs of several of the highest buildings.

A profound darkness enveloped all the city, pierced only by the red street lights and an occasional shaft from a searchlight.

In its move to check "monstrous acts" committed by some "unworthy" members of its organization and other workers' groups, the Anarchist-Syndicalist Federation, together with the National Federation of Workers, cited these illegal steps:

1. The search of houses for "unmentionable purposes."

2. Arrest of persons because of personal hatred or individual reprisals for attacks on Leftist militiamen.

The workers' federation announced popular tribunals, composed of labor representatives, were ready to "judge" those implicated in the Fascist rebellion.

lution a communication was sent by the American consul general at Tangiers to a rebel leader.

The text of the notes of protest will not be made public until today, but the Hull announcement indicated the tone they are expected to take, a tone of strong warning.

President Roosevelt is keeping in constant touch with the situation by telephone. Secretary Hull remained at his office in the State Department last night.

The first intimation that an American warship had been fired upon came from President Roosevelt at Rapid City, where Marvin H. McIntyre, Presidential secretary, handed out the following statement:

"The President has received dispatches relating to the dropping of bombs in the vicinity of the U. S. S. Kane, 38 miles off the Spanish coast by an unidentified plane. He has talked with the Secretary of States and representations will be immediately made to the Spanish government and the Spanish rebels.

"Any further information will be talked with the Secretary of State The President is in constant contact with Washington."

The tenseness of the Spanish situation and the gravity with which President Roosevelt regards it were indicated recently when the President cut his drought trip short by a week in order to keep closer in touch with developments.

Earhart at Cleveland.

Cleveland, Aug. 30 (AP).—Cleveland airport officials said Amelia Earhart Putnam landed her "flying laboratory" plane here, tonight about 7:30 o'clock (Eastern standard time). She was en route to New York from Los Angeles on a transcontinental flight. Airport attaches said she intended to spend the night in Cleveland. Mrs. Putnam left at 7:35 a. m. (Central standard time) today.

Dr. Cory Dead; Takoma Park's Oldest Citizen

Union Veteran Is Believed Last to See Body of Abraham Lincoln.

Dr. Azro Jackson Cory who, it is believed, was the last person to view Abraham Lincoln's body, died yesterday at his home, 107 Chestnut street, Takoma Park, Md.

As an officer in the Union Army, he was acting captain of the honor guard that watched over Lincoln's body as it lay in state at Columbus, Ohio. It was his duty to see that the casket was closed before removal to Springfield for burial.

Dr. Cory was the oldest living inhabitant of Takoma Park and was 90 last April 5.

Born in Lawrence County, Ohio, he attended public schools throughout the State. Benjamin F Cory, his father, was provost marshal of the Southern Division of Ohio His mother was Mrs. Susannah Lunsford Cory.

Enlisted at Age of 18.

In 1864, when he was only 18, Dr. Cory enlisted in the Union Army. On April 24, 1865, he was commissioned a first lieuenant in the 198th Infantry of Ohio Volunteers. His service led him through the Tennessee campaign, including the battles of Chickamauga and Lookout Mountain. He was wounded several times.

After the war he taught school a few years in Polk County, Mo. During this time he was reading law, and was admitted to the bar in Ohio in September, 1874.

Later that year he went to Florida and was admitted to that State's bar. After a period of practice there, he came to Washington as a patent attorney, affiliated himself with the firm that came to be known under the name of "Rogers-Cory."

Several years later he entered the Government service as a patent examiner. On January 3, 1882, he married Miss Marie Matheson Chase, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Took Degree in Medicine.

In 1884 he built one of the first homes in Takoma Park, paying two cents a foot for the land. About this time he was studying medicine at Howard University, then a university exclusively for white persons. He received his degree but never practiced.

Dr. Cory retired in 1916, after 40 years in the Government service. He took up his hobby of gardening and painting. Until a few years ago, he was active in civic affairs, having held the office of president of the Washington Theosophical Society. He also was a recognized scholar on comparative religions.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the home. J. W. McGuire, president of the Washington Lodge, Theosophical Society, will officiate. A military burial will take place Wednesday in Arlington Cemetery.

Besides his wife, Dr. Cory is survived by two sons, Dr. Ernest N. Cory, Maryland State entomologist and head of the entomology department at the University of Maryland, and Dr. Robert M. Cory, veterinarian inspector of the Baltimore health department. There also are four grandchildren, Ernest Cory, jr., William Robert and Jean Marie, sons and daughters of Dr. Ernest Cory, and Azro Jackson Cory, son of Dr. Robert Cory.

New York Milk Holiday Held Certain Labor Day

Poland, N. Y., Aug. 30 (U.P.).—A milk holiday in New York State, to be called Labor Day, appeared a certainty tonight after a mass meeting of disgruntled dairymen here today.

Loud support was voiced to the suggestion of Stanley Piseck, at whose farm the meeting was held, that they withhold their milk on call demands for a $3 price and elimination of the classification plan have been met.

After the meeting, attended by 7,000 dairymen, Felix Piseck brother of Stanley, said leaders had secretly set the date of the strike. The date will not be made public, he said, until within 36 hours of the holiday.

'Forgotten Man' of Death Row Believes Fight for Life Is Won

Execution Stayed in 1934, Kentuckian Has Waited Fruitlessly for Three Executives to Act on Plea; Practices Barnyard Imitations in Cell.

By the Associated Press.

Eddyville, Ky., Aug. 30.—The "forgotten man" of death row, who has waited nearly two years for a summons to the electric chair, today was confident it never will come.

Since the night of October 26, 1934, when his execution was stayed a few hours before he was to have taken the last walk, Sylvester Warner, 26, has awaited the word that would mean life or death.

Thus far there has been no action on his plea for executive clemency.

Month after month has passed and Warner has watched a dozen men cross the corridor to the death chamber in Kentucky's Western State Penitentiary. But he remains in death row, waiting for some word from the Governor's office.

The night he was to have died Warner was moved into the pre-execution chamber at the end of the row. A few hours before midnight Gov. Ruby Laffoon commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of Huston Jeffries, who was convicted with Warner on a double-murder charge.

At the same time the Governor ordered Warner's execution stayed, pending a study of his application for clemency.

After more than a year Gov. Laffoon retired from office, leaving the matter undecided.

His successor, Gov. A. B. Chandler, was absent from the capital today, and when acting Gov. Keen Johnson was asked about the case he said:

"Who is Sylvester Warner?"

After hearing the details, he said he would leave the matter for Gov. Chandler.

Warner, convinced no news is good news, has been passing the time by practicing barnyard imitations in his cell.

"Everybody here likes him," said Warden Jess Buchanan.

Even the prosecutor who obtained his conviction, W. A. Coffey, of Columbia, said he was more entitled to mercy than Jeffries.

Manila, Aug. 30 (AP).—The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey ship Fathomer was refloated today from a reef at Port San Vincente, onto which it was driven by a typhoon which swept northern Luzon Island August 15. Officials here were notified the Fathomer was only slightly damaged and is being towed to Manila.

Science Rally At Cambridge To Lure 2,500

Leaders of World Thought to Offer Views at Parley Opening Today.

By the United Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 30.—The vanguard of 2,500 American and Canadian scholars arrived here tonight for the opening tomorrow of a two-week conference of arts and sciences in connection with Harvard's 300th anniversary celebration.

During the conference, which ends September 12, 72 leading world scholars will present papers on the whole field of human culture and thought, many aspects of scientific effort, man's status in the world today and the complex relations of national and racial groups.

Eleven participants are Nobel Prize winners. Forty-three are coming from twelve European countries, 21 from the United States and others from Japan, China, Australia, Argentina and Canada.

They include Albert Einstein, originator of the theory of relativity; Tullio Levi-Civita, of Rome, who provided what proved to be a stepping stone for Einstein's theory; Pierre Janet, French psychologist and psychopathologist; Charles Jung, Swiss psychologist; Sir Arthur Edington, English astronomer and physicist, and Robert Millikan and Arthur Compton, American cosmic-ray researchers.

In the first week of the conference will be presented phases of religion, music, philosophy, mathematics and astronomy. The opening scientific papers will be given in conjunction with meetings of the American Mathematical Society and the American Astronomical Society.

Clark Attacks Landon; Bacon Raps New Deal

Misstatements Are Laid to Kansan; G. O. P. Leader Charges Coercion.

A battle of statements continued to enliven the national political campaign last night. Among the charges, counter-charges and explanations, were:

Representative Robert L. Bacon, Republican Eastern Congressional campaign manager, accused Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, of seeking to coerce employes to vote the New Deal ticket in November.

Senator Clark accused Gov. Alf M. Landon of "misstatements" in his Buffalo speech on taxation and Government spending.

The Republican National Committee continued its charges of inefficiency and carlessness in the Resettlement Administration.

Rexford G. Tugwell, head of the Resettlement Administration, in a magazine article said there was a segment of the farm population incapable of self-support and which would retard the economic progress of the Nation unless something was done about it.

The Progressive Republican Committee for Franklin D. Roosevelt sent a telegram to Landon attacking his tax speech.

Coercion Charged.

"New Deal fear of defeat in November," said Bacon, "has caused it to launch another wide campaign for support which for sheer stupidity and silliness outdoes many other things attempted by it."

He charged that Clark had formed a committee "which seeks coercion of employes to vote the New Deal ticket in November.

"It is an agency of intimidation designed to compel support of persons who can be personally 'delivered' and they include 'employes' and others who will 'do as they are told,'" he continued.

Bacon said the move was intended to get employers to deliver the votes to those dependent upon them.

Clark explained that about 200,000 letters bearing his signature had been sent out through Democratic headquarters in New York, urging the recipients to become "committees of one" to convert their friends and neighbors into New Deal voters. He said he conceived the idea from a suggestion made by President Roosevelt in a speech.

Calls Landon Talk Muddled.

Clark counter-attacked from another direction with charges that Gov. Landon's tax speech was "muddled."

"In one breath," said Clark, "he denounces indirect or hidden taxes, and declared for direct taxes. In the next breath he demands repeal of the most important pieces of direct taxation based exclusively on ability to pay, particularly the 1936 tax on undistributed earnings.

"One definite thing that emerges from Gov. Landon's hodge-podge of half-truths and suppressions is that he lines up squarely with the big tax avoiders. At Chautauqua he made a desperate attempt to clear himself of the Hearst stigma by a banal, theoretical discussion of academic freedom."

Clark continued by charging that Kansas stands forty-eighth among the States in State aid for education.

"But the good and amiable Governor in his Chautauqua speech was apparently only interested in removing the Hearst curse," Clark continued.

Landon Unfair, He Says.

He added that William Randolph Hearst had been reported to have told Landon that what he was interested in was taxes, and intimated that Landon and Hearst agree upon that subject. He charged that the Kansas Governor had been unfair in his argument because he left out of his comparisons the last year of the Hoover Administration.

"Candidate Landon," Clark declared, "professes great sympathy with the little fellow's burden of taxation, but the revenue act of 1936 which he would immediately repeal distinctly favors the small enterprise and that is one reason why it is hated by the big fellows.

"The policies advocated by Gov. Landon at Buffalo are exactly the policies pursued under the tragic regime of Mr. Hoover, which sent the national income down the toboggan."

General Denial Issued.

The Republican attack upon the Resettlement Administration was a continuation of a previous statement charging that the Administration's records in various State and regional offices were not being protected and that some of them were lost. In some instances it was charged that notes and chattel mortgages taken in connection with Government loans had not been recorded. Resettlement officials have issued a general denial of the charges.

Tugwell, in his magazine article, in Current History, said that "some 700,000 farm families have profited by this form of help (loans and grants) to date, ranging from actual cash grants for the most destitute, to well-secured loans for the more fortunate families who incidentally are already paying off their obligations with satisfying regularity."

"Of the $71,000,000 paid out in rehabilitation loans, $11,000,000 has already been returned."

In its telegram to Landon, the Progressive Republican committee said:

"You deplored rising taxes from 1932 to 1936, but failed to recognize that taxes had to rise in the face of calamitous emergency and great recession in business with accompanying decline in normal tax collections."

Chicago Steel Concern Boosts Wages $200,000

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Keystone Steel and Wire Co. today announced a general increase in wages for 1,500 plant employes, which officials said would be equivalent to 3 cents an hour.

With a profit-sharing plan, to be inaugurated simultaneously, the increase will boost the total pay roll by $200,000 annually to more than $2,000,000, the highest level in the company's history.

The profit-sharing plan will be on a graduated scale, beginning with payments of 4 per cent on all net profits over a million dollars in a year and rising to 20 per cent on profits over $1,300,000.

Stamp Collecting Tricksters Scored By Postal Official

By the Associated Press.

New postmasters have been warned by J. M. Donaldson, first assistant postmaster general, not to be "taken in" by stamp-collecting tricksters.

"Some stamp collectors have as many rackets as a prerepeal beer baron," one official complained yesterday. "Why, right now collectors can get $50 worth of special delivery stamps for $10, and we can't touch 'em."

Frank H. Ellis, assistant superintendent of the postal service division, keeps posted on things like that. His explanation of "rackets" is:

Suppose a small town collector wants 100 special delivery stamps. Perhaps the town postmaster is new or the incumbent anxious to build up stamp sales.

"Let me have a job delivering specials," the collector suggests, "and I'll deliver them for eight cents instead of the usual nine."

The rest is easy. He sends himself stacks and stacks of special delivery letters, and because he gets the delivery fee it costs him only two cents a stamp instead of ten.

Cracking Down on Dope

trafic and Andrew Lago his principal runner. So it came to pass that on July 30, 1935, a stranger came to Galveston and registered as Benjamin Venuti at a hotel owned by Celli.

Next day the newcomer was introduced to Lego by the hotel manager. It was the beginning of a beautiful friendship. Venuti and Lago reached the pal stage in a few days, but the former bided his time. He allowed all of August to go by before taking Celli's salesman aside one day and confiding:

"Andy, I'm planning to bring some dope in from Mexico."

"Why go to such bother?" replied Lago. "I can take care of you."

Twice during September the stooge furnished Venuti with heroin. On one occasion the deal was witnessed by James J. Biggins, district supervisor, whom Pocoroba had summoned from San Antonio headquarters. The undercover agent introduced his boss as "my doctor friend from Georgia."

Stooge in the Way.

That cooked Lago's goose, as far as collecting damaging evidence against him was concerned. It was Celli's turn. But the stooge was in the way. The agent knew it would be difficult to establish contact with the boss directly for illegal drugs as long as business relations between the runner and himself were proceeding so smoothly.

So Pocoroba, alias Venuti, skillfully picked a fight with his erstwhile buddy without bringing suspicion on himself. Celli figured the quarrel would be patched up soon and, meanwhile, he would give the customer his personal attention.

First thing he did was accommodate Venuti with an ounce of morphine for $60. It had been smuggled from a Spain-to-Galveston steamer. More purchases followed in ensuing weeks. The trap was slowly closing.

One day the undercover agent announced he needed hereoin. Celli said he was out, but his friend, Joe Luke, could fill the breach. Three days later Venuti was calling on Luke at his Houston gambling dive. The host was a former prizefighter with bulging muscles and flashing brown eyes. His gambling house had many women patrons.

Like Celli, he was an Italian-American and like his confrere he was too smart to be addicted to drugs. But, whereas, the Galveston quarry was middle-aged, burly, bullet-scarred and brusque, Luke was 13 years younger, a smart conversationalist and a dapper dresser.

He was right in character on the day when, facing the huge crowd which had gathered to wave him off to the penitentiary, he passed out 25-cent cigars and said:

"Well, I am going to give Uncle Sam a little time. I hate to be kept locked up so long, but my business will go on as usual."

Luke was suspicious of Venuti at first. He instructed the prospective patron to return to Galveston and await developments. This was January 28, 1936. Back at Celli's, the "Fed" had but a short wait until Luke's runner, named Jack, appeared. Celli assured Jack, "This guy's okay," but the heroin deal fell through for the time being on account of price and quantity complications.

The upshot was that Venuti had to motor back to Houston. He told Luke he could finance no more than 20 ounces.

"All right, since Celli vouches for you, I'll give you credit," said Luke. "But you understand that otherwise I couldn't because I don't know you.

"As for this morning, I am surely sorry that I had to put you through the inconvenience of driving to Galveston. But you cannot blame me much, because I didn't know you and this is a dangerous business. It means the pen, you know."

Venuti nodded sympathetically.

Jack walked in about that time and the bargain was made, 20 ounces at $40 per. Venuti put $700 on the line and the other $100 on his cuff.

Luke was selling his way into Leavenworth on the installment plan.

Delivery was made that evening. Jack turning over the goods in front of a Houston sandwich stand. Venuti, after seeing Luke's buffer safely out of sight, calmly entered the parked car of a fellow agent who had witnessed the transaction.

Second Investigation.

Officer Pocoroba might not have been so calm had he known that three agents working out of New Orleans headquarters were at that very moment prowling around Luke's place on a different investigation, ignorant of the fact they were jeopardizing Venuti's build-up as well as his life.

Next day the wily masquerader returned to the gaming den and paid the $100 balance (Uncle Sam always settles his just debts). He spent the next night in Celli's, playing "coon can" and drinking wine. As he was about to leave, the host announced, in a fatherly tone.

"Mr. Venuti, I hope you will not be offended by what I am going to tell you. It is so important that I cannot keep it to myself. The people with whom you did business in Houston have sent somebody here twice with the news that you are a narcotic agent.

"Personally I don't believe it, and to show the fellows in Houston that I have full confidence in you I told them that if they are afraid and you will need some more stuff, they can send it to me and I will deliver it to you."

(Mighty white of you, Mr. Celli.)

A few days later the commuting dope chaser was kibitzing a card game between Celli and Lago when, the match finished, the chief began anew:

"Lago, you and Mr. Venuti had a quarrel and I sincerely wish you would forget it because Mr. Venuti is a real man and a gentleman. As for the rumor Joe Luke put out, I vouch with my life that it is absolutely ridiculous."

"I have told the fellow who Joe sent here that if they are afraid to give him any stuff, they can send it to me and I will give it to him."

It seemed Luke had learned three narcotics officers were giving his place the double-o, not for evidence incriminating him, but in search of some suspect outside his own extensive ring. This development, coupled with the rumor that Venuti was one of three Italian agents who had made a clean-up in New Orleans recently, had sent him galloping to the Louisiana metropolis.

The Government spy, on February 6, was notified by Celli that Luke was back from New Orleans with a fellow in tow who could identify Venuti as a Federal agent—if he was an agent.

"Fine, let's get it over with," said Peddler Venuti.

"It's silly, I know," replied Celli. "Come back at 1 o'clock."

The time was fast approaching to close in on the ring. But Agent Pocoroba would give them their showdown. He was punctual for the 1 p. m. appointment.

Lago came in and called Celli outside. They held a short conversation and re-entered the rum shop, where Venuti was waiting. A few minutes later Lago went out alone. On the stroke of 2 Celli asked his trusted friend to come with him. They walked to a nearby street intersection.

"The scout from New Orleans will drive by here shortly and give you the gaze," Celli explained.

They had not long to wait. A coupe drove slowly near the curb. The two men inside wore dark glasses which concealed their features. They stared in the direction of the sidewalk pair, drove around the block and returned for a second peek.

Celli and his protege then parted, the latter heading back to the barroom as per instructions.

An hour later the proprietor walked in.

"Everything is okay," he announced proudly, smiling at his vindication. It was hard for Pocoroba to keep from giving vent to a deep sigh.

Next day he was at Luke's dive again in Houston. The dope dealer offered a cigar and an apology, adding:

"After a scare like this the only thing to do is to back out."

The agent assured him he had come this time not on business, but only to receive an expression of confidence.

"You are all right," said Joe. "Come back whenever you want to."

Agent Benedict Pocoroba would have chosen that same night to fulfill the invitation only he had a previous date in Galveston. With two other narcotics men, he arrested Celli, Lago and two lesser characters. Simultaneously Luke and a couple of his satellites were nabbed in Houston.

Lago jumped his bail after being indicted, along with the others, for violation of the Harrison act and is still a fugitive. Jack, who was Joe Luke's runner, escaped. Two Spaniards who smuggled the morphine into Galveston from Barcelona were apprehended in their homeland.

The Government spent $2,460 for 52 ounces of heroin and 15 ounces of morphine in collecting evidence. Dispensed to addicts, the same amount of drugs would have realized $30,000 at "shot" prices.

* * * *

A humorous concluding twist is given the Celli case, as it is known at Washington headquarters, by a headline in a Galveston newspaper on the day the prisoneres were bound over to a Federal grand jury.

"G-Man, After 6-Month Pose as Peddler, Smashes Dope Ring," the headline proclaimed.

The expression "G-Man," of course, is the nickname commonly applied to special agents of J. Edgar Hoover's Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice.

Soviet Fliers Arrive At Bulun in Siberia

They had remained weather-bound in the Ambarchix Bay near the Lena River for some time.

On August 5 the airmen, Sigismund Levanensky and Victor Levchenko, took off from San Pedro, Calif., for the flight to Moscow.

Bond Reduced, Tear Liberated To Await Trial

Alleged Mobster Now Held in Bail of $21,000 on Four Charges.

George F. "Teddy" Tear was released in his most recent encounter with the law on a reduced bond Saturday because Assistant District Attorney Harry Underwood believed the alleged mobster, jailed many times, is already under sufficient bond "to hold him."

Shortly after United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage had arraigned Tear Saturday morning on a charge of operating a car equipped with a smoke screen device, and set his bond at $10,000, Underwood ordered that the bond be reduced to $5,000. The bond was posted and Tear was released.

A mysterious sponsor for Tear had previously posted bond totaling $16,000 in three other cases in which Tear is accused of law violations.

"We are still considering the case," Underwood said yesterday, explaining why he ordered the reduced bond. "There are certain facts I want to know, and couldn't get yesterday.

"When I get those facts it may seem advisable to increase the bond. In that case we may raise the bond to $10,000. That can be done at any time."

At the same time Underwood said he felt that Tear was already under sufficient bond to keep him "on hand."

"He is now under a total of $21,000. The only reason for placing a man under bond is to hold him ready for trial and I think the amount under which Tear is now free is enough."

Tear was captured Friday night in a chase with Internal Revenue agents, who reported that Tear loosed a smoke screen when he discovered the agents were in pursuit. The chase covered several miles in the downtown area of Washington.

Tear waived hearing when arraigned Saturday.

According to the police record Tear is under a $5,000 appeal bond, following his conviction in a $2,000,000 liquor conspiracy case. A $1,000 bond was posted for his release following indictments charging him with assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill in connection with a police chase near the White House several weeks ago.

He later was released after posting a $10,000 bond when arraigned on a charge of taking part in a local gang shooting.

30 Hurt in French Riot.

Paris, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Thirty persons were injured today at Rheims when disturbances broke out among 1,000 persons at a meeting presided over by Jacques Doriot under auspices of his recently founded "Parti Populaire Francais." The crowd was dispersed by mobile guards and firemen, who sprayed water on the disputants.

Dern's Cortege En Route West From Chicago

Officers of 6th Army Corps Area Pay Respects to His Memory.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—The funeral train bearing the body of the late Secretary's family as a train Dern, to its final resting place in Salt Lake City, was met by high ranking officers of the Sixth Army Corps Area today as it paused for 45 minutes in this city.

Gen. Dana Merrill, acting head of the Corps Area, and several members of his staff, paid their respects to Mrs. Dern and members of the late ecretary's family as a train crew serviced the seven-car special for the rest of the trip West.

The train arrived in the Chicago & North Western's yard at 11:45 a. m. (E. S. T.) after an overnight trip from the Nation's Capital, where funeral services were held yesterday. Arriving from the East over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, it left for Salt Lake City over the North Western at 12:30 p. m. A half hour ahead of schedule.

Cabinet Members.

Accompanying the Dern family were Attorney General Cummings, Secretary of Commerce Roper, Acting Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy; Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, and Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff.

President Roosevelt, and a number of Government officials with him on his drought-inspection tour, will meet the funeral party at Salt Lake City, where services will be held Tuesday in the Mormon Tabernacle.

Dern, whose home was in Salt Lake City, was Governor of Utah from 1925-1932.

Scheduled stops on the route west were at Ames, Iowa, at 7:45 p. m. (E. S. T.), and at Omaha, Nebr., at 12 a. m. (E. S. T.), but earlier arrivals were possible because of the 30-minute advance in the departure from here. The train will travel over the Union Pacific from Omaha.

Choir to Sing.

Salt Lake City, Aug. 30 (AP).—Three hundred voices whose blended notes have been heard 'round the world will sing a requiem Tuesday for George Henry Dern, Secretary of War.

The famed Mormon Tabernacle Choir will be supplemented by the temple's equally well-known organ at funeral rites in the historic Tabernacle here.

Most of the 300 men and women in the choir personally knew the tall, square shouldered man who served them as Governor and who, stilled by death, will "come home" Tuesday morning. He was not a member of their Latter Day Saints Church however.

Langer, Once Ousted, Seeks Governorship

Bismarck, N. Dak., Aug. 30 (AP).—William Langer, once ousted as Governor following conviction on fraud charges by a Federal grand jury—later reversed—was back in the political limelight in North Dakota today as a candidate for his old office.

Langer, picked by one of the two groups of Nonpartisan League factions in this State a week ago, to run for the Governorship, was shaping active campaign plans for the November election.

He was "drafted" by a convention of Nonpartisan League county chairmen more than a week ago and will make the race as an independent candidate. His opponents will be Gov. Walter Welford, Republican, indorsed by a second group of nonpartisans, and John Moses, Democrat.

D. C. Girl Uninjured In Hagerstown Crash

A story appearing in yesterday morning's Post reporting the automobile accident of the family of Arthur Jordan, of 1221 N street northwest, at Hagerstown, Md., Saturday night, was based on misinformation, according to relatives in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan were injured in the accident, and not their 8-year-old daughter, Ruth. Mrs. Jordan was treated in Washington County Hospital for lacerations to the head and knees. Mr. Jordan suffered cuts to the knees, also, and was treated in the hospital.

Ruth and Arley Jordan and William Isler, other persons involved in the accident, were unhurt, it was reported last night.

Chicago Veteran Found Strangled to Death

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Thomas Widera, 49, World War veteran, was strangled to death with a leather belt today after his skull was bashed in with a brick. Leo Derengowski, Edward Orzechowski and Philip Kopachi were held for questioning after his body was found in a passageway.

The pockets of the dead man's clothes were turned inside out. His shoes were ripped off. Apparently, the police said, the killers were looking for Widera's $200 bonus. They did not find the money.

Widera spent it all a month ago to pay for his brother's funeral.

State Laws On Child Labor.

Vigorous appeals for support of the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution have been once more rejected by the American Bar Association. The majority refused to consider the measure in terms of its laudable objective. Opposition seems to have been based entirely upon the argument that the Federal Constitution should not be cluttered up by social regulations that might be more properly controlled by the States.

By a vote of 233 to 109, the association gave a new lease of life to a special committee instructed to work against ratification of this amendment and in favor of uniform child labor legislation in the States. In this way the legal fraternity makes its influence felt against child labor as a social evil while trying to prevent the transfer of power over a local problem to the Federal Government.

It is interesting to note in this connection that five of the nine legislatures which met in regular session in 1936 strengthened statutes dealing with child labor. Virginia raised from 16 to 18 years the minimum age for employment in various hazardous occupations. Massachusetts, New York and Rhode Island passed more extensive acts for the protection of children gainfully employed. South Carolina passed a more general protective labor law, contingent, however, upon similar action in Georgia and North Carolina.

No one of these States has ratified the proposed child labor amendment. This fact immediately suggests that they recognize the necessity for controlling the employment of minors, but they insist upon keeping that control within their own legislatures. The slow but persistent advance of State laws renews hope that the inexcusable exploitation of children, while millions of adults remain idle, may be stopped without the necessity of changing the Constitution. If the evil can be wiped out through State legislation, certainly that is the preferable course.

Rumania's Foreign Policy.

The elimination from the Rumanian cabinet of Nicholas Titulescu, for years foreign minister of the kingdom, may foreshadow important changes in Rumania's foreign policy.

Ostensibly Rumania's international orientation was not involved in the struggle between Premier Tatarescu and Mr. Titulescu. The question which finally led to a break between them was primarily a domestic one—the attitude to be taken by the government toward such reactionary terrorist organizations as the Iron Guard whose activities, during recent years, have kept the kingdom in a constant state of turmoil.

Mr. Titulescu took the position that these organizations constitute a grave danger to the nation and should therefore be banned. But while both King Carol and Premier Tatarescu have condemned terrorism and have announced their determination to root it out, they have refused to agree to the outright suppression of the Iron Guard and kindred Fascist bodies.

This break in the cabinet, therefore, has distinct international implications. The Iron Guard has a point of view similar to that of the Nazis from whom it is said to have steadily received material support. It favors closer ties with the Third Reich.

Mr. Titulescu has been an ardent champion of the French orientation. He has sought to keep green the alliance with that nation as well as to maintain close and intimate relations with Rumania's partners in the Little and Balkan ententes. During recent years he has also favored the establishment of an entente with Soviet Russia since that nation had voluntarily agreed to abandon all claims previously advanced to Bessarabia. It has been his constant belief that Rumania's interest demands the maintenance of the status quo in Europe and opposition to any and all countries, such as Germany, that wish to redraw the map of Europe.

It is obvious that Germany has regarded Mr. Titulescu as a thorn in its side. Intensely hostile to Russia, it has viewed with alarm the increasingly friendly relations between that country and Rumania, since it is only by way of Rumania that Russia could come to the assistance of its ally, Czechoslovakia. It is no wonder, then, that the Nazis have made a great effort to wean Rumania away from the French bloc and, particularly, to prevent a Rumanian-Russian entente.

Because of Rumania's dependence on France for loans without which it would be impossible for it to build up its armaments, the elimination of Mr. Titulescu as foreign minister may not be immediately reflected in any change in Franco-Rumanian relations. But it is quite possible that it will weaken the ties between Bucharest and Moscow.

Government And Business.

The United States Chamber of Commerce has released a statement summarizing the views of its membership on various problems of the day, such as the proper relations between government and business, budget balancing and taxation, monetary manipulation and tariffs, social security legislation and collective bargaining.

Since the chamber represents hundreds of business organizations embracing about 700,000 members, it is necessarily limited to rather broad generalizations in outlining a program that all can indorse. Nevertheless, any organized group purporting to speak for businessmen ought to manifest a sensitive understanding of the major problems confronting the country. Otherwise they fall under suspicion of being governed entirely by selfish considerations and forfeit their chance to exert much influence upon public opinion and political policies.

In its declaration of guiding principles, the chamber unfortunately demands too much and makes too few concessions to the interests of the public at large. For example, the declaration begins with an uncompromising definition of the function of government in relation to industry, which leaves the former in the role of a mere policeman protecting individual enterprise. Then, after denouncing Federal control of production, the chamber demands a modification of the anti-trust laws to permit private agreements to restrict output, or as cautiously expressed, "agreements increasing the possibilities of keeping production related to consumption."

It further recommends that each industry be permitted to formulate and put into effect rules of fair competition which receive governmental approval. Such demands are equivalent to asking for restoration of NRA codes, free from governmental supervision. Refusal to admit that industrial self-regulation of this type necessarily calls for a large measure of governmental control to prevent abuses is neither candid nor calculated to bring about much needed reforms in our anti-trust laws.

The demand for State control of relief expenditures is well put as is the vigorous denunciation of coercive taxation employed for ulterior purposes, with revenue only incidental. The plea for a balanced budget would have been more effective, however, if it had not been accompanied by a declaration against any further increase in taxes. The impression that the chamber is against anything involving a monetary sacrifice from business or entailing concessions is strengthened by the omission of all direct references to reciprocal trade agreements. Moreover, the suggestion that the export of surplus farm products should be aided by subsidizing the domestically consumed portions of such crops is hardly consistent with the chamber's declared belief in laissez faire.

In failing to indorse even in principle social security laws providing protection against old age and insurance for the unemployed, the chamber lays itself open to suspicion that its members are more eager to be relieved of obligations than worried about governmental interference. Although the burdens of the social security laws are heavy, and adjustments will doubtless be necessary, constructive reforms do not require abolition of the new insurance systems. Without the coercion of law, there is certainly no reason to suppose that private employers would or could cope with the problems created by old age and unemployment.

As the Chamber of Commerce says, "The true function of government is to maintain equality of opportunity for all, to preserve the sanctity of contracts and to assume those collective activities which society must conduct as a whole." But it does not follow from this statement of a sound doctrine that the Government should refrain from all intervention so long as business prefers to be left free. The problem before the country is to limit the kind of liberty that injures free enterprise, without unduly restricting legitimate activities.

Unspeculative Surgery.

Medical science is an awesome combination of marvels accomplished and marvels attempted. Basing its every theory upon experience, it moves with caution and leaves speculation severely alone. This is eminently correct—for the practitioner. But it is sometimes annoying to the layman. Nor is its provocative quality often more sharply demonstrated than by a case reported in the current issue of the American Medical Association Journal, which the Associated Press transmits to the lay world.

The instance in question is that of a woman of 31, who, operated on for a brain tumor, had half her brain removed, survived for five years and died of an accident "which had no connection with the operation." The A. P. dispatch declares that, for those five years, the woman "lived happily." Yet the sole speculative note supplied by the surgeon reporting the case is contained in a phrase to the effect that the fortuitous nature of the former patient's demise "leads one to wonder how long she might have lived if the accident had not occurred."

That is all—and it is much too meager for the non-medical spirit. There is no reason to doubt that the woman "lived happily" with only half a brain. Indeed quite a number of people seem to enjoy themselves without affording positive evidence that they possess over a quarter of a brain apiece. The subject of speculation for the non-medical mind is not how long this particular woman might have lived happily with her half-brain. It is, rather, whether happiness in living bears a direct or inverse relationship to the cerebral content. But on this important issue our medical deponent sayeth not.

Confused Budget-Making.

Budget estimates prepared by department heads of the local government may be slashed six times before they are finally translated into appropriations. First, the District Commissioners modify these requests so as to make the entire budget balance. Usually the Federal Budget Bureau makes further cuts to bring Washington's expenditures into line with national policies bearing no proper relationship to local affairs. Various items may be further trimmed by the House Appropriations Committee, the House itself, the Senate Appropriations Committee and the Senate.

No doubt this is one reason why administrative officials requested for the next fiscal year, a total of 33 per cent more than they were granted in the current budget. From long experience they have learned that their estimates will be ruthlessly pruned. And a good deal of that pruning is likely to be done by individuals who know relatively little about the District's municipal problems. Under these circumstances the temptation to make generous estimates seems to have been irresistible, in spite of the Commissioners' appeal for co-operation in their economy program.

Various other factors helped to swell the total estimates to more than $59,000,000. Department heads probably anticipate that more revenue will be available next year because of the fiscal relations study. If so, every agency would like to share in the benefits.

More important than these psychological reactions, however, are the growing needs of the city. Washington has experienced rapid expansion in the last few years. At the same time municipal funds have been kept at a minimum and many urgent needs have accumulated. If the Capital City is to be saved from the disgrace of lowering its standards in education, public health and welfare, larger appropriations are an absolute necessity.

There is no indication that any department has asked for more money than it really needs. Undoubtedly a $59,000,000 budget could be spent to advantage. But no such budget will be approved, because revenue will fall far short of that figure. Since the District is on a pay-as-you-go basis, it is imperative that some desirable undertakings be postponed to avoid a sharp increase in taxes.

The compromise between desirable expenditures and bare necessities must be worked out by the Board of Commissioners after a series of public hearings. Their task will be especially difficult this year because of the uncertain amount of the next Federal contribution. But responsible budget making is even more seriously hampered by the absurd practice of permitting a Federal bureau to reshape the program of expenditures worked out by the heads of the local government. Until the Commissioners acquire the right to send their own recommendations to Congress a large part of the chaos arising out of the present system is likely to remain.

In the handling of public funds the modern trend is invariably toward greater concentration rather than diffusion of authority. If the Commissioners can be trusted to supervise the expenditure of District funds, certainly they should be authorized to transmit their spending program direct to Congress. As soon as the fiscal relations problem can be solved, the arbitrary practice of double budget-making should become the chief target for civic agencies working for improvement of our local government.

Merely Queerly Mortal.

From the Atlantic (Iowa) News-Telegraph.

Reports come from Pottawattamie County that farmers in that county, believing that we must return to nature and begin a restoration and conservation of water resources, are now building private ponds on hillsides where natural springs exist. In other words, the farmers are seeking to restore the surface water which excessive drainage has removed in this section, resulting, according to the belief of many people, in the falling-off of rainfall.

It was only a few years ago that everyone in the agricultural section was going hell-bent for drainage, running off all of the surface water so as to increase the cultivatable land. Now it begins to be evident that this was a mistake and we will venture to say that within the next few years farmers all over the agricultural belt will be doing what is reported in Pottawattamie County. It looks like a sensible move to restore this surface water as much as possible. We mortals are peculiar. We note that the highway commission in many places is planting trees along our main highways. Before the roads were paved they cut down the trees along them so as to reduce the moisture to a minimum. Now that the highways are hard-surfaced more trees are being planted. We are always doing something and then undoing it. But, after all, there is hope for a people who, realizing the folly of something they have done, set about to rectify the error.

Mr. Landon's Addresses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In Mr. Landon's Middlesex speech, aside from generalities and unspecified criticisms, the only thing worthy of notice was the expression "we want to return to the American way." What did he mean by the American way, and in what particular has the present Administration deviated therefrom?

Would he return to the Hoover way, or the Coolidge way, or the Harding way, with its Tea Pot Dome and other scandals? Maybe he would advocate a return to the days of the Credit Mobilier, or the Black Fridays, under Grant. Perhaps he would prefer the days of the Civil War, when Lincoln flouted the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case and fought a four-year war to perpetuate a strong centralized Union by flouting the Constitution. Or, maybe he would go way back to the days of Hamilton, when property rights were held more sacred than human rights, and only property owners and the select were allowed to exercise the right of suffrage.

In his Chautauqua speech his reference to education and an untrameled press and freedom of speech was well timed and will be indorsed by all classes of citizens, including Mr. Roosevelt, who has done more for education along that line than any President since Thomas Jefferson.

In his Buffalo speech he touched a vulnerable point in his attack upon the spending, and perhaps waste, in relief projects. All deplore that and wish it could be avoided but think it was necessary in order to bring order out of chaos and take care of human beings who had been thrown out of work by the uneconomic policies of all the Republican Administrations since the World War.

He also deplored the fact that the poor were burdened by an unjust distribution of taxes, in the shape of "hidden taxes" and advocated that the rich should be taxed more heavily, and by direct taxes. Yet in the same speech he advocated the repeal of the tax bill passed at the last session of Congress, which bill was designed to make the big corporations disgorge their vast surpluses and distribute to the stockholders dividends that they were entitled to and which had been withheld for the purpose of escaping taxation.

Bonds As Buttresses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Secretary Morgenthau's recent saving bond program being brought within reach of the average American workingman's income adds a firm buttress to the security of American liberty. This fact stands out in relief when one realizes that we are living in an age of political and economic chaos.

Every purchaser of United States Government savings bonds contributes his mite in solidifying the democratic institutions of America. To perpetuate these institutions for the benefit of generations yet unborn, it is our bounden duty to enlist our resources in response to Secretary Morgenthau's call.

With the masses of its people as financial shareholders in this Government, the echoes of communism, fascism or any other despotic forms of government shall forever be as sounding brass and the tinkling of cymbals. Thus shall the light of liberty forever burn on American soil. HARLAN A. CARTER.
Washington, Aug. 28.

'Hearst Over Topeka.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think a persual of the stories of Secretary Ickes' life as he tells them in "Who's Who" before he got appointed to the only office he has ever held, and afterward in the Congressional Directory would convince anyone, who heard the Secretary's far-fetched, personal radio attack of August 27, that it is not Hearst "Over Topeka" and "Over the White House," that Secretary Ickes really fears so misanthropically, but the loss of the only political job he has ever had. It is not Hearst "Over the White House," but the statesman, Landon, in the White House, and the politician, Roosevelt, out of the White House that is bothering the Honorable Harold L. Ickes. Let us hope he will soon again be returned to serving his Chicago clientele of economic royalists. J. D. MASON.
Washington, Aug. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Ickes' speech has a special merit in that it shows Republicans remiss in not concocting in 1932 a song entitled: "Hearst Over Albany—Oh, Where Is He Now?"

It was Mr. Ickes' tough luck that his speech followed so closely Mr. Landon's admirable—and confessedly unanswered—expose of New Deal squandering and rattle-brained tax schemes. It reduced his efforts to nullity.

Hearst looked upon Landon and found him good, says Ickes. That is what probably irks the New Deal wrecking crew no end—so have millions of others of the type for whom nose rings are not standard equipment. They will recognize "Hearst Over Topeka" as a typical campaign effort, unloaded with intent to discredit, and will discount it at true value. E. G. BARR.
Washington, Aug. 28.

The President's Error.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest your "Watch Coughlin" editorial and the comment it elicited. But there are others who need watching more than the radio priest. However much people may criticize many of the President's policies, all are agreed that he is a man of character and courage who does what he believes to be his duty without flinching or giving a thought to what others may think of his acts.

If I were to be asked to name his greatest error in his high office, I would say he has not been discriminating enough in choosing those with whom he has counseled. He has been too democratic, and listened to too many he should have shunned, and because he could not adopt some of their Utopian schemes some of them have become disgruntled and have sought to undermine his character.

I have wondered if those responsible for the Republican campaign realize the significance of an event which happened within the past week—that of the wealthiest member of the Senate, a Republican and running for re-election on the Republican ticket, coming out and indorsing the candidacy of the President, declaring that his election meant more than that of himself. That alone will counteract all the "Red Scare" propaganda circulated by those who are known to lack character; for no man of his wealth would do that if he thought our form of Government was endangered. ZAC T. BROWN.
Washington, Aug. 29.

A Housewife's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All the hullaballoo about the rise in food prices makes my thoughts turn back to the middle twenties when we paid in the suburbs of New Jersey 65 cents for butter and eggs, 70 cents a pound for porterhouse steak and turkey, 30 cents a pound for string beans, 18 cents a quart for milk and other things in proportion. Meat prices are higher than they were a year or two ago, but it is not a great deprivation to do with less meat.

There are many ways of preparing it which will reduce the meat bills and there are many substitutes such as macaroni and cheese dishes. Fruit and vegetables are still cheap and plentiful and far more varied than they used to be. I can buy for 15 cents the same amount of spinach I used to pay 35 cents for. String beans are 5 cents a pound. Peaches and apples may be bought for 10 cents for four pounds. What used to be considered luxuries are now sold in the chain stores and bought by people who would never have dreamed of having them just a few years ago.

No, Mr. Landon, I can't feel very sorry for the housewife. I've been one myself for more than 40 years and I think her job has never been so easy. As for "hidden" taxes, what difference does it make whether they are hidden or not? We have to pay them anyhow. Besides is it anything new to conceal taxes under any Administration? Until a new breed of politicians arises in our ken there is little likelihood of consumers being informed where the shoe pinches.

HARRIOT T. COOKE.
Washington, Aug. 29.

Turnabout's Fair Play.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Strickland Gillilan in a letter to The Post recently expressed the opinion that the broadcasting of Ted Husing and Coe was "blether, tosh and flapdoodle."

If Mr. Gillilan wants to hear some real blether, tosh and flapdoodle, he should take an evening off and listen to one of his own broadcasts. WARREN RADFORD.
Landon, Md., Aug. 27.

Less Sentiment, More Brains Asked.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently a sentiment has become current running somewhat as follows: you can't beat something with nothing. Which means that Landon has "nothing," whereas, Roosevelt has "something;" that whatever is right and proper is "something" and whatever is bad and improper is "nothing." Simplicity itself, isn't it?

Assume that the Republicans favor capital and the Democrats labor. The Republicans never refused labor or the farmer a hearing on the ground that they were laborers or farmers. But there is no doubt that the Democrats actually refuse to grant hearings to capitalists on the ground that they are "money changers."

To be a Democrat one must apparently subscribe to the theory that "business," "the old guard," etc., are actually evil. I do not think the Republicans ever attempted to prejudge labor and the farmer on the basis that they were evil.

Seemingly, the majority of current Democrats are actually convinced that the well-to-do are greedy, heartless, tyrannical, in short that they are aligned with the devil. Labor, the converse.

This is a childish viewpoint. To infantile minds people are either good or bad—absolutely so. The adult realizes that no group has any patent on horns or halos.

I cannot see why it is not as much the duty of labor to protect the property of operators as it is the duty of capital to relieve unemployment. The Democratic attitude is that business failed to assume its responsibility for the working man's welfare, hence has lost its right to be heard at all. On the other hand labor is solely in the position of an aggrieved party with no responsibility to capital, the possible injury to or collapse of the latter being no concern of labor. I think the inconsistence of this attitude is evident. It is founded on the extravagant notion that labor has such clean hands that it can exercise authority without assuming responsibility.

It is this smallness of imagination which disgusts me. On one hand we have all kinds of small projects, small in the sense that they consider in an abstract manner the specific problems of a relatively small group here and there. Other groups are not considered at all. On the other hand for the general welfare "nothing" is being done.

This is a time when the country needs less sentiment and more brains. Literally we need someone of firm conviction, strong mind and far-seeing vision—one who can tackle the problem of America as a whole, not split it up into a collection of warring factions.

Every time one group is benefited by the Democrats, other groups are disgruntled or injured. This is not the action of a wise administrator nor the whim of a dictator, but the blunders of an amateur. If we don't wind up on the rocks it will not be due to the pilot.

It seems to me that the Republicans come closer than the Democrats to tolerance. They were, and still are, in favor of the fundamental rights of labor, higher farm prices and social security, but unlike the Democrats, they are not prone to lose sight of the major problem in a series of minor projects.

It may be "nothing" to the Democrats, but it sounds like common sense to me. J. H. BOYER.
Washington, Aug. 27.

The Post Impressionist

Personally Conducted.

Post Office, Monday.

THAT particular guide to the White-House-and-Washington removed, for a moment, his very official-looking cap and mopped his furrowed brow.

"In point of service," said he, "I am one of the oldest local members of the corps. I have been showing visitors the Wonders and Beauties of the Capital for a period in excess of 25 years, or a quarter of a century.

"I claim," he continued, "that guiding is a profession, if you practice it properly—what I mean, something with learning to it; you've got to learn such a lot.

"And I claim, if you're in a profession and don't practice it properly, you should ought to get out."

He explained:

"In the first place, you've got to learn speeches in good English, containing all the knowledge any reasonable person could desire to acquire regarding the historic places you take 'em to. I got a regular college graduate to write mine, back in 1911. Saw his diploma. Paid him $15 for the job. He wanted $25 and deserved it, but I held out for $10, so we compromised on $15 and a couple of rounds of drinks. And I've kep' it strictly up to date ever since, at an average expense of as much as $5 per annum.

"And, in the second place, you've got to build up a sinking fund of extraneous information. You know—data about your regular subjec's most people wouldn't want, but that there's always every once in a while some loon who wants it, and he'll set up a holler if you don't spill it right off the bat. You've got to be as foolproof as a numbers runner.

"And guiding has to be especially high-grade in Washington, because there's another thing you have to have to guide here, which you don't need it so much in other places. I mean the quality of tack. Tack is a Washington requisite-specialty.

"Take almost any other city, for instance.

"Hardly any of 'em have guides the way we have—only rubberneck-wagons the way we have, but we have 'em in addition. You don't have to have tack in those cities. A visitor to New York, he's not got any personal interest in New York, and there's nothing there to prejudice him.

"But here in Washington, why, every tourist who's American-born—and 80 per cent of 'em are—it's his Capital as much as it is the guide's or any of the other tourists'; there's the personal interest. And every tourist who's an American citizen has his own politics, and he's sensitive as hell about 'em, and if you try to show anybody Washington without touching politics—why, what have you left to show him, I ask you?

"Not to mention the Civil War . . .

"Tack? Guiding in Washington, you need as much tack as an old-fashioned carpet-layer!

"Then take another side of it all:

"I claim the Corps of Guides is a body dedicated to patriotic service, because our work stimulates patriotism in the people we serve. And I claim that we ought to receive a higher civic recognition than the District Commissioners have ever given us, because our just being here attracts tourists to Washington, assuring them as it does of educational attention at a moderate cost.

"But I got to admit that business has been getting bum.

"During the predepression years, the Corps shared in the general prosperity. We felt that, in some ways, the prosperity was artificially maintained at its high level, but we accepted it—we took ours. Then came the crash—and we got it worse than the other professions.

"The depression made practice for the lawyers. It made patients for the doctors. It even brought more people to Washington than had ever been here, at one time, since the war.

"But they didn't help the Corps. Those of them that weren't trying to get codes explained or busted were nearly all here to work for the Government to end the general depression—or else to work harder to get Government work for themselves to end their own depression. They thought they knew more than we could tell them. They thought they hadn't any kind of guide except their Congressmen.

"This year began with a slight upcurve, but that declined sharply immediately after the national conventions.

"Presidential-election years are never much good for the Corps, because then tourists don't have to come to Washington; Washington goes to them—in other cities and the sticks. Still and all, this is looking like it was going to be the worst Presidential election year for Capital guides I've ever seen.

Vatican News.

The illness of Pope Pius XI naturally creates a tense situation among the foreign journalists in Rome, who are plotting and scheming, you may be sure, to get there first with the developments in his condition and eventually with the flash.

The situation as to news of the Vatican is a curious one, judged by American methods, which always make for tunneling, so to speak, the laying of pipe lines and a little monetary outlay. It is a wonder, under the circumstances, that the foreign correspondents, in their anxiety to be first on the cable, do not sometimes fall into grevious error. Their constant effort is to scoop Mgr. Enrico Pucci.

Mgr. Pucci is a parish priest in Rome who has developed over the years an almost exclusive news service at the Vatican. He has built an office organization which grabs the news red hot and shoots it around town, by phone or motorcycle, to the bureaus of the foreign press, and collects a revenue which should be highly satisfactory. The foreign journalist going to Rome soon learns that for reliable news of the Vatican, received in time to be of competitive value, he must do business with the monsignor.

This situation sometimes challenges the prosperity of American and British journalists landing in Rome to take over. In the United States for example, official news is free, and it would be an unseemly thing if some deserving Democrat enjoyed an airtight commercial advantage in news from the White House. The British tradition is pretty much the same as ours, so American and British corerspondents are always restless regarding the Pucci arrangement.

But, though many ingenious attempts have been made to subsidize attaches of the Vatican and stick a foot in the door, nobody ever puts anything over on the monsignor. A man may think he has established an absolutely reliable pipe-line to another source of information and discover one day that his news is red hot and exclusive all right, but unfortunately untrue, which is a serious flaw in news. So eventually he calms down, accepts the situation and comes to terms with the monsignor.

* * * *

One American paper which had long been buying news from Mgr. Pussi decided a few years ago, in the interest of economy, to discontinue his news service and told him so. This led to an interesting difference of opinion. The monsignor held that he had been for many years an employe of the American paper and therefore, was entitled to the customary benefits which Italian journalists receive from their employes upon being asked to resign.

The American paper declared that it had never employed Mgr. Pucci, but had merely bought news from him, just as one buys food from the grocer. He said he had been an employe, however, and pointed out that he had never received his extra two months' pay per year or double pay for Sunday service. Not surprisingly the American newspaper finally decided, in the interest of good will, that it would be much more desirable to retain Mgr. Pucci than let him go. Often, under the Italian law, an employer decides to gamble on the life expectancy of an old employe rather than pay his discharge benefits.

* * * *

Mgr. Pucci is a hustler, with a thorough appreciation of the value of speed in shoving out news of the Vatican, and he makes no effort to exclude competitors. They are welcome to try, but after a few experiences they reach the conclusion that the monsignor is the best source for coverage, accuracy and speed and go along with him.

The Vatican also seems well pleased with the arrangement, for the monsignor knows his way around, knows the religion, the customs and the delicate diplomatic requirements of the situation, and, moreover, knows news.

Now, however, a crisis approaches, and naturally there will be jockeying and jostling for an advantage on the flash. It will be an interesting time in our set in Rome with the boys calling on their contacts and passing out 100-lire notes in the hope of scooping Mgr. Pucci.

Lundeen in Race For Senatorship

St. Paul, Aug. 30 (AP).—Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Leborite Representative from the third Minnesota district since 1932, today was his party's candidate for United States Senator, taking the place on its ticket made vacant by the death of Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

Selected by the Farmer-Labor State central committee last night, Lundeen will oppose Representative Theodore Christianson, Republican, and Patrick J. Delaney, Democrat, in the November election.

A former Republican, Lundeen, in accepting the nomination, said he would support the "liberal policies of our late leader, Gov. Olson." The Governor died August 23. His successor also urged party members to unite behind United State Senator Elmer A. Benson, gubernatorial nominee.

Spain's Outlook

Rebel Program Revealed As Pure Reaction; Catalonia Promises Difficulties Even Though Madrid Should Fall.

By Barnet Nover.

THE STATEMENT issued by rebel leaders at Burgos Friday, revealing what they plan to do if and when they come into power, is both a child of extreme optimism and an act of unparalleled stupidity.

The rebels spoke as though they were on the eve of victory. Yet, after seven weeks, there is nothing in the military situation to suggest that Gens. Mola and Franco are about to march into Madrid. Not only has the drive on the capital proved more difficult than had been anticipated, but the rebels have also failed to capture Irun and San Sebastian, against which they have hurled all the forces they could spare from the Guadarrama front.

Yet now that they have made their position clear as to what Spain's political future would be should they succeed to power, it is essential that they win quickly. For their program will, in all likelihood, not only stiffen the resistance of all the elements of the Spanish population that have supported the government at Madrid, it will also alienate those who have hitherto been on the fence.

Burgos Statement Promises Military Dictatorship.

THE REBEL LEADERS in exposing their views leave nothing to the imagination. They openly admit that once in power they will establish a thoroughgoing military dictatorship without benefit of even such a mock Parliament as that which obediently ratifies all acts of Hitler in Germany or that which performs the same servile function for Mussolini in Italy.

Trade unions are to be suppressed; an end is to be put to all parcelling out of land to peasants and the land already divided up is to be returned to the former owners; confiscated property of every kind is to be restored; all civil liberties are to be wiped out. The map of Spain is to be redrawn. Catalonia and the Basque region, centers of loyalist resistance to the rebels, are to lose their identity.

Catalonia is to become part of Aragon as it was in the days of King Ferdinand; Guipuzcoa (one of the Basque provinces) is to be turned over to Navarre as a corridor to the sea and the Asturias region is to be cut up. In the course of time a "plebiscite" is to be held to determine "the wishes of the people" regarding the question of restoring the monarchy. In the meantime no quarter is to be given any who upheld the Left Front government. Its leaders are to be "exterminated."

It is clear that the Burgos program is one of pure, unadulterated reaction. Fascist in many of its particulars, it is even more Bourbon than Fascist. Italian fascism and German national socialism have at least rendered lip service to radical economic ideas; to achieve popularity they have at least made a pretense of being anti-capitalistic. Spanish fascism in the form expounded by the Burgos junta would simply throw Spain back to the Middle Ages.

Announcement Intended To Reassure Reactionaries.

ONE MAY ASK why the rebel junta felt it necessary to state its program at this time. A few weeks ago Gen. Franco, the acknowledged leader of the rebellion, gave out an interview in which he denied Fascist aims for his movement. The fact that this did not persuade the loyalists in the south to desert to the rebels, that it did give offense to the convinced monarchists and Fascists, may have won him over for tactical purposes to extreme reaction. But it may very well be that the reason for the issuance of the Burgos pronunciamento at this time was to hold out to the great landlords, the clergy, the royalists generally, a glimpse of the promised land, so that they would not grow faint-hearted in the struggle which gives every indication of being prolonged. Without their support the rebel movement would be doomed and could get nowhere.

The one thing that is certain is that if the rebels do take possession of Madrid their struggle will only be half over. There will still remain before them the far from simple task of putting down all vestiges of resistance in the east and southeast, in Catalonia and Valencia, in the Asturias and the Basque country and in those parts of the south where large sections of the population have not taken kindly to the rebels and their Moorish mercenaries.

In particular Catalonia may prove a very hard nut for them to crack. For the Catalans, having tasted liberty for the first time in more than two centuries, will not submit, without a real struggle, to the kind of regime the rebel generals are hoping to establish in Spain.

Catalonia Represents Center Of Wealth.

SITUATED in the northeastern corner of Spain, the four Catalan provinces of Barcelona, Tarragona, Lerida and Gerona constitute the most important economic unit in the nation. Although its population of 3,000,000 constitutes but a small proportion of the whole, Catalonia has far more than its share of the industrial and agricultural wealth of Spain and Barcelona, the largest city in the Iberian peninsula, is also the greatest port on the Mediterranean.

Catalonia's position in Spain has not been dissimilar to that of Ireland in the United Kingdom. It has never taken kindly to the persistent attempts made by Spanish rulers to impose Castilian culture and the Castilian language on it and to govern it directly from Madrid. The Catalans have long memories. The late Col. Macia, for years leader of the Catalan separatist movement, used frequently to inveigh against the "crime of 1714," that is the destruction of Catalan independence by Philip V, first of the Bourbon kings of Spain.

In the nineteenth century, when a great revival of Catalan culture took place and a new literature arose in the Catalan language, which differs from Spnish as much as Spanish does from Italian, autonomist and nationalist aspirations revived with it. More than once did Catalonia set all Spain by the ears. And the struggle between Catalonia and Castile is by no means over. Indeed, whatever the course of events may have in store for Spain there are reasons to believe that Catalonia will continue to be a storm center.

If the rebels win, the choice facing Catalonia will be either to submit, which would mean the destruction of those autonomous rights it has enjoyed (with one great interruption) under the republic, or to declare its independence and fight to preserve it against the forces that a reactionary regime in Madrid will muster against it.

There can be no question what the decision will be. The Catalan independence movement, while submerged because of the autonomy enjoyed by the region under the republic and the realization that Catalonia would be hard hit economically without its Spanish hinterland, nevertheless has deep roots.

It is no mere coincidence that a few hours before the republic was proclaimed at Madrid the Catalan republic was proclaimed at Barcelona; that the Catalan Generalidad under President Luis Companys joined forces with the rebels in the uprising of October, 1934, which the Madrid government was able to put down and that Catalonia at once threw in its weight with the Left Front government when the present Fascist-monarchist rebellion broke out.

Workers Showed Strength In Uprisings Of 1934.

IN 1934 Companys failed. His arrest and imprisonment and that of other Catalan leaders quickly followed and the central government was soon able to re-establish its authority over Catalonia.

This time Catalonia made quick work of the Rightists but it was due less to the skill of the government than to the fact that the workers—Anarchists, Syndicalists, Socialists and Communists—took up arms on behalf of the regime. Today there is hardly a spot in any of the four Catalan provinces where the rebels have any foothold and a Catalan force is besieging the rebel stronghold of Zaragosa in the old kingdom of Aragon.

But between the revolutionary elements in Catalonia and those who are directly providing the Madrid government with its principal support there is an important difference.

In Madrid the dominant radical element is Socialist. Despite much loose talk of Communist rule the fact is that the Spanish Communists, following out the policy adumbrated at the last congress of the Third Internationale, are above all eager to keep alive the Popular Front even if that means shelving the dictatorship of the proletariat.

In Barcelona, however, the dominant radical element is composed of the Anarcho-Syndicalists. Their doctrine of Communismo Libertario is not Communist at all. They want the workers to take over the industries themselves; regard the state which the Communists would make the controlling element in the nation's economic life, as the source of all evil. As long as the Popular Front government at Madrid is in a state of seige, as at present, the various radical and revolutionary element may keep their ranks closed and fight shoulder to shoulder against the rebels.

But it is by no means certain this cohesion would outlast victory. The recent action of the Barcelona loyalists, therefore, in declaring for the establishment of a practically independent Catalan state in which the workers would control industry was a warning as much to their allies in Madrid as to their enemies in Burgos.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Table Thumping Olympics.

President Roosevelt is reported favoring an invitation to the rulers of Europe to attend a conference and discuss plans for outlawing war. Nothing has made the world so nervous since the last peace conference.

* * * *

The President would invite Stalin, Mussolini, Hitler, Lebrun, King Edward, some representatives of Japan and China, and possibly a few other rulers to meet in one room. The drawback is to find a real estate owner with a building he wants wrecked.

* * * *

Such a conference would probably start a world war before even the question of seating arrangements had been completed.

* * * *

Whom Mussolini should sit next to would start the opening riot and can you imagine what would happen if Hitler found himself sitting in a draft instead of Lebrun?

* * * *

* * * *

What if the Chinese delegate told the funny story about the Japanese dairymaid and the two Russians, Pat and Mikeloloff?

* * * *

Suppose King Edward in one of his whimsical moments took a notion to shake up a cocktail of his own invention and had to ask suggestions whether to use French or Italian vermouth? Oh, man!

* * * *

* * * *

It would be almost impossible to hold them together long enough for a conference, even if they showed up without any fights on the train. Stalin would probably have to hurry back to Moscow for his regular Tuesday executions, Mussolini would have to get home by noon to keep the mike from getting cold and Hitler would run out if he had to spend the first hour with nobody saluting him.

* * * *

Good luck, however, to the parley. It would be safer to hold it over the telephone, however, if only to prevent anybody thumping the table.

* * * *

Brotherly love, the right of man, and peace, perfect peace, are subjects that might hold the attention of the boys closely, but it might be a good idea to put on a fan dancer to avert yawning.

Duce's 'Peace Talk' Pleases Pope Pius

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XI today sat by the radio in the library of his summer retreat here and listened intently to the speech delivered by Premier Benito Mussolini upon conclusion of annual army maneuvers.

The pontiff was pleased with Il Duce's references to peace and Italy's desire to co-operate with the powers for its maintenance.

In churches throughout Rome, meanwhile, expiatory services for the clergy in Spain were conducted.

Speaking to 30 Italians who came to pay him homage, the Pope, weakened by worry over the Spanish war, thanked them for coming to see "the father who not only grows older but is, indeed, old."

His 79 years, he said, "are an imposing number and provoke many preoccupations."

Landon Faces Uphill Battle, Poll Discloses

Most of Kansan's Electoral Votes on Borderline; 6 States Hold Key.

Editor's note: The American Instiute of Public Opinion polls, the outstanding organization in the country in scientifically gauging convictions of citizens, appears exclusively in Washington in The Post. But other newspapers in various parts of the country are conducting interesting polls. So The Post has appointed Claude E. Robinson, noted author of "Straw Votes—A Study of Political Prediction," to write a series of articles analyzing all straw votes taken in America. This is the first article of a series to run until the November election.

By Claude E. Robinson.

With the campaign for the Presidency entering its active phase and sentiment beginning to crystallize, early surveys of voting preferences reveal two outstanding facts. These are:

'(a) Gov. Landon is facing a stiff uphill fight with an outside chance to win by a small majority in the electoral college. President Roosevelt, on the other hand, can win by a small electoral college majority, which conceivably can become a landslide.

(b) The crucial struggle will take place in six agricultural-manufacturing States in the Midwest and on the Middle Atlantic seaboard. These are Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, New York and possibly Pennsylvania.

These inferences are drawn from the figures released by the American Institute of Public Opinion. Under the direction of Dr. George Gallup, this organization has periodically sampled the Presidential preferences of the voters in every State in the Union.

In later articles, the question of the probable accuracy of the Institute's figures will be dealt with in detail. In the meantime, the tabulations furnished by the Institute clearly indicate the main outlines of the current struggle for the White House.

Evenly Divided.

At this point in the campaign, the potential electoral vote is about evenly divided between the two leading candidates, with 276 for Landon and 255 for Roosevelt. Roosevelt enjoys a commanding lead in those States where he is ahead, whereas Landon has only a few States where his margin can be described as comfortably secure.

In concrete figures, 237 of Roosevelt's 255 electoral votes, or 93 per cent, are held by a plurality of 5 per cent or more. Landon, on the other hand, holds only 79 of his 276 electoral votes, or less than one-third of his total by this margin. Sevety-one per cent of Landon's electoral college vote is on the border line where the outcome is now in doubt.

With this situation, any trend tward Landon away from Roosevelt, short of a political tidal wave, will not cut heavily into the President's electoral college standing, whereas even a small movement of voters away from Landon to Roosevelt in one or two cruical States is enough to re-elect the President; and if this small shift spreads geographically, Mr. Roosevelt's electoral vote can reach the proportions of a landslide.

Anything May Happen.

Anything may happen in a political campaign, but, according to the generally accepted rules of politics, the greater the pre-election plurality margin in any given State, the less chance of an overturn. When plurality margins are narrow, however, the leading candidate's position is continually threatened by even small campaign incidents.

Alienation of a special interest group or neglect to conciliate a party clique (many observers think that Mr. Hughes' failure to shake hands with Hiram Johnson in California in 1916 cost him the State and the Presidency) may be sufficient to decide the election. Moreover, organization work counts heavily when the vote is close.

As the situation now stands, the Democrats conceivably can change electoral votes by merely organizing a more efficient transportation system than their opponents to hail voters to the polls.

The Republicans, on the other hand, must change current political attitudes before they can cut very heavily into Mr. Roosevelt's vote. Most politicians would regard the latter as the most difficult job.

171 Critical Votes.

The second fact brought out by the tabulations of the American Institute of Public Opinion, is that the election is likely to be won or lost in five or six States in the Middle West and on the Middle Atlantic seaboard, notably Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, New York and possibly Pennsylvania.

These States weigh heavily in the electoral college, casting 171 votes, and at this point in the campaign sentiment in them appears to be about evenly divided, with Landon having a slight advantage.

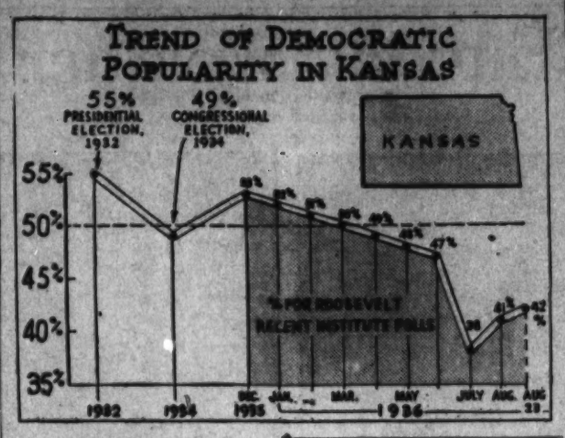
Mr. Roosevelt comes to the campaign in these States with a backlog of electoral college strength in the solid South, the border States of Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee, the Southwest, the Pacific Coast, several Mountain States and some so-called progressive States like Wisconsin and North Dakota. He needs only New York or two Middle Western States like Illinois and Michigan to win.

Key to the Outcome.

Should he win New York and cut heavily into Landon's vote in the Middle West, he will ride into office for a second term with a heavy majority in the electorial college.

Mr. Landon's backlog of electoral votes is drawn from New England, where he appears to enjoy a comfortable lead; Kansas, his home State, and some other Eastern States like New Jersey and Delaware.

From that point on his fate depends on how popular he can make himself in the Middle West and the big States on the Atlantic seaboard. These sections hold the key to the outcome. Landon's assignment is a difficult one and if he carries it to a successful conclusion, his feat must go down in the annals of politics as a truly remarkable one.



Christian Book

By William Lyon Phelps.

Death of Bunyan.

John Bunyan, one of the greatest geniuses in English literature (though he did not know it and would not have cared if he had) died on this last day of August, 1688, at the age of 59.

When he was 16 years old, he became a soldier and this experience, although not lasting very long, made a tremendous impression on him, and was used to good advantage in his books. It should be remembered, too, that the career of the great soldier, Oliver Cromwell, reached its climax when Bunyan was about 20.

* * * *

Bunyan had no intellectual advantages and scarcely any literary education except the Bible. He was not more than 19 when he was married, and English literature owes an enormous debt to that young wife. She had some religious books; Bunyan read them and passed through a terrific spiritual experience, which he has described in his autobiography.

He soon began work as a Baptist preacher, for which he was put in prison for 12 years. Bunyan wrote four works of genius—his autobiography called "Grace Abounding," which appeared in 1666, the "Pilgrim's Progress," 1678, second part, 1684, "The Life and Death of Mr. Badman," 1680, which might be called the first English realistic novel, and "The Holy War," 1682, where he used the imagery that came from his early career as a soldier.

* * * *

Bunyan was absolutely filled mind and soul, with the language of the Bible, the greatest prose ever known; joined to that was his command of common, colloquial talk among the poor and humble of his day; these two fountains of speech rose from the boldest, most pictorial imagination conceivable. His imagination was romantic in its splendor and realistic in its astounding details. No one who has ever read the "Pilgrim's Progress" can forget the fight with Apollyon, Doubting Castle and Giant Despair, the Valley of the Shadow of Death, Vanity Fair and the trial scene in court, and the glorious visions of the Celestial City.

"Pilgrim's Progress" was instantly a best seller; it went through ten editions in seven years. It had more influence on Christian thought than any other book in English. But it was not until many years had passed that its greatness as a work of pure literature was fully recognized.

Spectators See Double as 1,500 Twins Gather

By the Associated Press.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 30.—Prosaic singleton's literally saw double today, gazing wide-eyed at a varied assortment of "look alikes" who assembled in an amusement park for the fifth annual convention of the National Twins Association.

Notes of mutual interest were exchanged by an estimated 1,500 twins as they mingled confusedly with doting parents and thousands of somewhat bewildered onlookers.

It was just an informal prelude to the business of comparative statistics.

Edward M. Clink, who five years ago at Warsaw, Ind., started it all by enrolling a dozen sets of twins, grinned expansively as he looked over his flock and predicted even more followers next year.

Mrs. F. M. Cawby, of North Judson, Ind., who at 80 shares with her sister the distinction of being the oldest twin enrolled, was disappointed. Her counterpart by birth, Mrs. H. S. Billings, of Los Angeles, was unable to attend.

"We looked so much alike when we were schoolgirls our teachers called us 'which' and 'other,'" she recollected wistfully.

Just what a problem marriage to a twin presents was revealed by Mrs. William F. Whitmore, of Fort Wayne, who is married to one.

"I never was quite sure which of them was my husband," she said. "It was exasperating, but finally I was able to identify my beau by the appearance of his clothing. Then, too, if one of them laughed I knew it wasn't him."

Franklin Delano and Frances Arlene Shanyfelt are the youngest duplicate collection at the convention. They are aged 2, and the babies of Fort Wayne's liberal endowment of 300 twins.

The Ilimakka brothers, twins themselves and associated with the University of Chicago, are here delving into the family history of delegates.

Landon Fights Roosevelt Gain In Home State

By George Gallup,
American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 30.—With three major speeches in the East behind him, Gov. Landon is back in Kansas to meet the threat of a reviving Roosevelt sentiment in his own State.

Polls of the Institute of Public Opinion show that the President's popularity has turned upward in the Sunflower State for the first time in eight months. That upturn has been matched by similar ones in several drought-affected States, such as Iowa and the Dakotas.

In December Roosevelt polled 53 per cent of the major party vote in Kansas as against 47 per cent for the Republican Party. Month by month, as the Kansas Governor was seen nearing the Republican nomination himself, Kansas voters drifted toward the G. O. P.

By March Kansas stood squarely at 50 per cent for Roosevelt, 50 per cent for the Republicans. Later, on the eve of the Republican National Convention in Cleveland, Kansas was 47 per cent for Roosevelt, 53 per cent for Landon.

The nomination of Gov. Landon sent Roosevelt's popularity in Kansas down like an avalanche. It reached a low-point of 38 per cent before it stopped dropping—a wide shift of sentiment from the 55 per cent Roosevelt had scored in 1932 when he took Kansas and its nine electoral votes from Herbert Hoover.

August balloting shows that Roosevelt's popularity has moved up four points since the first reaction to the Governor's nomination. In the Institute poll reported Sunday, Roosevelt had 42 per cent to 58 per cent for Landon.

Seek to Check Trend.

A No. 1 assignment for Republican strategists in coming weeks thus becomes the matter of checking any further gains for Roosevelt in Landon's home State.

Landon's present lead—58 per cent to 42 per cent—is still highly satisfactory to them, but they are mindful of the fact that Kansas occupies the emotional center of the farm belt's swing away from Roosevelt. If Roosevelt gains in Kansas he can probably gain in nearby Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas. Landon needs these States, to win.

Republicans are apprehensive that the President's "non-political" drought-inspection tour in this area may actually result in votes for him. Although Gov. Landon's plans for September campaigning have not been announced, it is possible he may follow up his Eastern speeches by speeches in his own backyard—calculated to appeal to the Middle West.

Democrats—looking at the trend away from Roosevelt in Kansas as shown in Institute polls—may be tempted to concede the State to the Republicans. If they do, however, they will be flaunting a political weathervane of some distinction, for Kansas has been on the winning side in every Presidential election since 1900.

FORE.—Some of the "boys" while away the Sunday afternoon by trying their hand at some fancy shooting on the miniature golf links. Even if it isn't so much exercise as hiking around the regulation 18 holes, they don't seem to have that Sunday trouble of waiting around on the tees for their turn to dub their drives.

Hollywood, Aug. 30.—Picketing the review parade:

"SWING TIME"—(RKO)—Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers for the first time in their joint careers have to work at top speed to retain top honors in their latest musicomedy flicker. They manage to do it but the sparkling comedy of Helen Broderick and Victor Moore comes a close second. The net result is the most rollicking picture in the Astaire-Rogers chain.

Story starts off at pallbearer pace but quickly gathers momentum when Astaire as a fortune-hunting dancer reaches New York with his doting elderly sidekick, Victor Moore. By chance of their own making, Astaire becomes acquainted with Miss Rogers, an instructress in a dance school; and Pop (Moore) with her chum, Deadpan Miss Broderick. How the four contrive to avert, and then stimulate, romance makes top-flight comedy.

Unlike their more recent pictures, Miss Rogers' dancing here suffers some in contrast with Astaire's, but she offsets this disadvantage by remaining her usual personable self. Music in picture, by Jerome Kern, projects one sure hit, "The Way You Look Tonight."

Eric Blore, Betty Furness and Georges Metaxa stand out elsewhere in cast.

"DRAEGERMAN COURAGE"—(First National)—Heorics of the draegermen in the Nova Scotia mine cave-in of a few months ago inspired this one, starring Jean Muir and Barton MacLane.

Plot is well developed to bring out all emotional angles of a situation in which MacLane as a fearless draegerman denounces unsafe conditions in a mine and is fired by his employer, Robert Barrat. A cave-in later traps the employer, a doctor, and several workers but MacLane is first in line to lead the rescue work. Miss Muir gives a nicely restrained performance as the doctor's daughter.

"DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE"—(RKO)—Bruce Cabot, Fred Stone and James Gleason in a melodrama that swings a punch against the parole system.

Like Universal's recent picture "Parole," the RKO offering deals only with abuses of the system. It preaches, yet is good, hardy screen entertainment.

Cabot impresses as a Jekyll-Hyde character, who is a model son at home but a congenital criminal elsewhere. His father (Stone) becomes a member of the parole board and is instrumental in obtaining his release upon his promise to leave the country. Instead, he attempts one final robbery and is in the act of killing a detective when his father intervenes and shoots him down.

Gleason gives an amusing performance as the all-wise detective who flits in and out of the story. Betty Grable, Louise Latimer, Nella Walker and Grace Bradley fill the feminine spots.

"KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED"—(Twentieth Century-Fox)—Weak story treatment and a so-so cast keep this picture from clicking.

Plot is shopworn, involving a girl (Rosalind Keith) who takes her attorney (Alan Dinehart) into the Far North country to claim a family gold mine. There her counsel and a confederate (Arthur Loft) try some shenanigans to rob her of the claim but are frustrated when the Royal Mounted enters in the uniform of Sergt. King (Robert Trent).

"THE SCOUNDREL."—Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur's picturization of their own original story for Paramount release, starring Noel Coward, with Julie Haydon, Stanley Ridges, Anita Morena, Alexander Woollcott, Hope Williams, Martha Sleeper, Edwardo Ciannelli, William Ricciardi and Raymond Bramley. Directed by the author-producers. A preview.

It was looked upon in the industry as a bit of a triumph when Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur thought up a screen story of sufficient pith and substance to lure Noel Coward before the motion picture cameras for the first and only film play in his acting career. When his performance was viewed by the critics, it was hailed as an unequivocal triumph for the British actor-playwright-composer as well as his sponsors.

That much-discussed Noel Coward picture, "The Scoundrel," touched here and there with a bit of the supernatural, is on view this week as a revival at the Little Theater and serves to strengthen the impression created at the time of its original release a year ago last April that it is unique among celluloid dramas.

The story concerns a young publisher who becomes involved in an adventurous and slightly cold-blooded series of romantic attachments and finally is forced to extreme means to right himself with The Girl and those whose opinions on earth he cherished most. Coward's first appearance is in a shower bath and the unkept processes of "waking up" to a new day. That is only a faint index of the surprises that pursue each other closely through the remainder of the action.

In addition to Crawford, the cast is notable for the inclusion of Julie Haydon, who executes a difficult assignment extremely well, Stanley Ridges and Raymond Bramley, both formerly of the National Theater Players; Alexander Woollcott, Hope Williams and the others whose names appear in small type preceding these comments.

An additional feature of timely interest is added to the Little's new bill by the projection of two of Fitzpatrick's Traveltalks on Spain ("From Rinaldi to Toledo" and "In Old Madrid"—picturing a noble country of ancient glories now being tortured by revolutionary conflict. The news events complete a bill of unusual merit. N. B. B.

About The Showshops

ALTHOUGH not yet officially announced, it will be soon that Charles Kranz, Washington Branch Film Exchange manager for United Artists, holds signed contracts for the exhibition of a considerable number of his company's releases on the screen of RKO-Keith's Theater during the season of 1936-37.

BELL.

This product will be in addition to the RKO-Radio, Universal and other productions for which RKO-Keith's is articled and will serve to take the place of the numerous Gaumont British films that formerly found their way to the screen on Fifteenth street.

The producers releasing through United Artists whose output, in whole or in part, will be shown at Keith's include Walter Wanger, Alexander Korda, of London Films, and Criterion Pictures. Among the stars who will come to the Keith screen under this arrangement may be mentioned such top-flight artists as Fredric March, the Bothwell of "Mary of Scotland," and soon to be seen in the title role of "Anthony Adverse;" Marlene Dietrich, whose next picture will be "The Garden of Allah;" Robert Donat, Merle Oberon, Miriam Hopkins, Charles Laughton, Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Henry Wilcoxon, Spencer Tracy and Charles Boyer.

While a complete list is not available at this time, it is reasonably certain that the new U. A. contracts will convey to the screen at Keith's such representative film plays as "Rembrandt," "I, Claudius," "Knights Without Armor," by the author of "Lost Horizon;" "The Divorce of Lady X," "Desert Intrigue," "Wurthering Heights" and "History Is Made at Night."

This valuable adjunct to the current RKO-Keith bookings insures a steady flow of product across the Fifteenth street screen during the months to come. Word of the consummation of the deal comes to this column from an unassailable source.

Speaking of RKO-Keith's, the face-lifting process through which the house is going for the first time in something dangerously like a quarter of a century, is progressing nicely behind the concealing expanses of the theater's false front heralding the many merits of "Walking on Air." As soon as the last evening performance is over and things quiet down a bit opposite the Treasury, that beaver-board front is yanked loose from its moorings, moved out to the curb and a pretty job of marble setting, electrical wiring, display frame installation and marquee enlargement goes rapidly forward. In the morning, with everything back in place—or almost—you wouldn't know anything important had been going on during the night. When the entire job is finished, inside the theater and out, RKO-Keith's will present much more the outward aspect of a playhouse designed for motion picture, rather than stage, entertainment. It is the present plan to unveil the new improvements simultaneously with the inauguration of the run of Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Victor Moore and Helen Broderick in "Swing Time," on Friday, September 4. With the new display frames and marquee lighting extended back to the main entrance doors, the lobby of Keith's will present a completely transformed appearance.

Friday's attendance at Loew's Palace Theater, following the Thursday night world premiere and international press preview of "The Gorgeous Hussy," starring Joan Crawford, broke every existing box-office record at that house. The picture has been going great guns ever since.

The banquet spread before the 19 newspaper, theatrical and exploitation men and one lone newspaper woman, my esteemed morning contemporary, Miss Betty Hynes, by Boniface Harry P. Somerville, of the Willard, and Carter Barron, divisional manager for Loew's, Inc., preceding the "Gorgeous Hussy" showing Thursday night, was a prandial delight that immediately wrote itself down in memory as one of the most perfectly appointed love feasts of its kind ever celebrated in the National Capital.

It deserves to be placed up there in the high brackets with the "Dinner at Eight" banquet at the Shoreham, George "Pat" Riley's dedication of the cocktail room at Wardman and Hal Horan's recent "March of Time" luncheon at the Carlton.

With such incorrigible humorists as Host Somerville, Oscar Doob, of Loew's; Bernard Sobel, author and publicist; Walter Trohan, of the White House Correspondents Association, George Durno and others about the board, the party went at once into high. Not only was it a feast of reason, but considerably more flowed than soul, and a great deal of it was almost as sparkling as the wit.

The preview season seems to be on, full swing, again. Yesterday afternoon the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drayma desks journeyed to Philadelphia, under the attentive auspices of Mrs. Irene Weber Sadel, executive secretary of the Washington office of Loew's, and Norman Fyle, the peregrinating publicity tycoon of the Eastern forces of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to catch an advance glimpse of the M-G-M film version of "Romeo and Juliet," starring Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard, with John Barrymore, Basil Rathbone, Edna May Oliver and scores more, a week prior to its opening in the National Theater here next Sunday night. There will be more about this in this space tomorrow.

Tonight, getting back into the swing of it, Manager Hardie Meakin is according the press a preview of the new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, "Swing Time," in the projection room of the Fox Film Exchange. You may not get the lown-down on this one before Wednesday, but there seems to be no way you can dodge getting it, sooner or later.

So don't say I didn't warn you!

The box-office sale of tickets for the road show engagement of "Romeo and Juliet," beginning at the National next Sunday night—if you can do with one more word on this persistent topic—opens this morning. Two performances a day, after Sunday night's "permeer," you will recall, with all seats reserved. In other cities, the advance sales for this picture have broken all known records—in New York, $4,800, as against $3,000 for "Ziegfeld." Line forms as usual.

Harry Jans and Maxine Jennings, the R. K. O. stock player, are romantic. The closing night of the Marx lads' act, "A Day at the Races," at San Francisco, was a riot. Every chorus girl came on with a painted mustache, similar to Groucho's. Chico played Groucho's part; Groucho played Chico's part, and Groucho's daughter, Miriam, played Harpo's role. Harpo came on the stage while the picture, "Devil Doll," was on the screen, attracted the audience's attention by whistling, and then proceeded to do a pantomime act with the flicker. When an actor on the screen started to eat, Harpo would try to grab the food from him. Harpo also tried to make love to the girls on the screen.

"Girls' Dormitory." This flicker marks Simone Simon's American debut. She was brought to this country by Winfield Sheehan when Twentieth Century-Fox was merely Fox. The new management waited to find what they believed would be a worthy vehicle for her. Then Darryl Zanuck cast her in "Under Two Flags," but after a week's shooting she was taken out of the cast. Some said it was because of temperament; others said it was because she had difficulty playing the role. Claudette Colbert, who has name value played the part.

FRED ASTAIRE.

Then Simone Simon, getting a salary every week, was given another opportunity. She was cast in "Girls' Dormitory" with Herbert Marshall, Ruth Chatterton, J. Edward Bromberk and Constance Collier—a great stage troupe who knew their business, acting. There has been talk that Miss Chatterton and Miss Simon quarreled. However, both will tell you that in playing a tense scene, Simone clenched Chatterton's hand tightly for support.

The picture was shot in 34 days and cost about $350,000. It is taken from the play, "Nature," by Ladislaus Fodor, and the screen play was written by Gene Markey, Joan Bennett's husband.

Director Cummings and Simone Simon did have one blowup on the set, the final day of shooting. They told each other off. Simone ran to her dressing room. However, Simone Simon and Director Cummings are now pals, and he is busy directing her in her next picture, "White Hunter."

"Swing Time." This picture was titled by George Stevens, who directed it. At first there was objection to the title, but this was overruled when Fred Astaire battled for it. The picture was announced as "I Won't Dance." Next it was called, "Never Gonna Dance," and this title seemed so certain that Jerome Kern and Dorothy Shields wrote a song of that name for the picture. Later, they wrote the song, "Waltz in Swing Time." However, despite all titles, the important thing is that it is "The new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture."

It is the second time Astaire has had a score by Jerome Kern; the first was "Roberta." Astaire always has tunes by the foremost composers: Vincent Youmans, Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and for his next flicker, now in production, George Gershwin is writing the music.

Gayety

"HINDU BELLES." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 24 scenes, starring Hinda Wausau, George Broadhurst and J. B. Hamp, supported by Gertrude Beck, Lorri Lamont, Bower Sisters, Franklyn Hopkins, Carmen and Everett and Jack Lamont. Produced by Bennie Bernard and staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

The year's at the fall, and bright lights again gleam forth at the Gayety Theater, where the 1936-37 season of glamour, girls and glee was inaugurated yesterday afternoon in a house shiny in its new dress of red and blue and bathed in the warm amber glow of new lighting effects.

Before some new drapes and on a newly floored stage of ballroom smoothness, Col. James J. Lake presented his opening attraction—a show the equal of anything coming through last season, and a show to set a fearsome pace for its successors to match.

Fittingly headlining the inaugural production is the pioneer, and probably greatest display artists of burlesque, Hinda Wausau. Miss Wausau needs no introduction to Washington followers of the lively art. Her particular eminence is almost beyond the power of mere words to describe.

Hinda Still "Tops."

What position and heights Miss Wausau has attained in previous seasons she still maintains, performing with that utter abandon which has made her a perennial favorite.

Particularly happy has been the choice of comedians for the troupe, for the wheel has few if any other comics who, individually and together are as continuously funny as George Broadhurst and I. B. ("Elmer") Hamp. True, their work shows but little variation from seasons back, but they continue to sell themselves in such an exuberant fashion that their numbers all take on the luster of novelty.

Nor is that all the show. There is also Lorri Lamont, a tantalizing exponent of the art of terpsichore, to add diversion. The Bower Sisters contribute several torrid dance routines, and Carmen and Everett, a smooth ballroom team, add new meaning to the term "class."

Gertrude Beck, as good a soubrette as there is, and Jack Lamont bear the straight portions of the sketches and the voice of Franklyn Hopkins is heard to good advantage. The ensemble appears in several complicated routines, and is especially effective in their modernistic number.

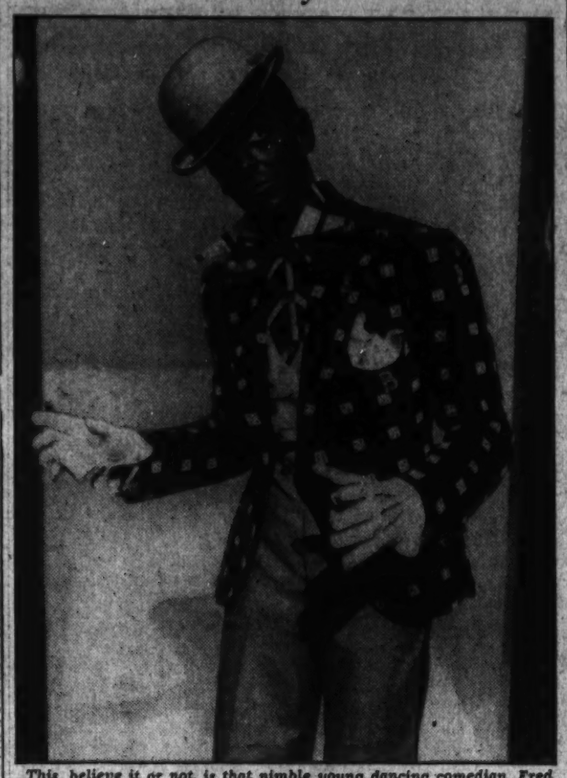
Dancer Goes Dusky for New Film



This, believe it or not, is that nimble young dancing comedian, Fred Astaire, as he appears in blackface for one of the sequences in "Swing Time," the new screen vehicle for him and Ginger Rogers, opening at RKO-Keith's on Friday of this week. From all sides where the picture has been previewed, it is reported to be in every essential respect the superior of "Top Hat." In this subject, the co-stars are made to hustle for first honors in comedy by Victor Moore who will be remembered forever as Alexander Throttlebottom, and Helen Broderick. With such a foursome in the leads, any picture ought to ring the bell.

The Gorgeous Hussy

What has happened so far: Peggy O'Neal's Timberlake, whose beauty and independent spirit are a byword in Washington, occupies a unique position as adviser of President Andrew Jackson. She sacrifices her love for John Randolph because he is opposed to Jackson's policies, and instead marries Secretary of War Eaton. Randolph is shot by a cowardly advocate of civil war whom he has denounced.

CHAPTER SEVEN.

"Union and Liberty."

When Randolph was absent from his place in the Senate during the ensuing week, Peggy gave little thought of it. It was rumored that he was slightly indisposed, and she assumed this to be the case.

Wildly contradictory stories had begun to sweep Washington about the mounting opposition to Jackson. Some persons felt that the President was soon to lose control entirely, many went so far as to predict open national revolt. It was with a great deal of anxiety that Peggy accompanied her husband to the Jefferson birthday celebration in the Senate. Tales were in the air that Jackson was to be challenged then and there, as he delivered the address of welcome. The apostles of States' freedom were reported to have already established the nucleus of a new Southern government, feeling that Jackson would be discredited and overthrown.

The lobby of the Senate was crowded. The specialty of the souvenir vendors was a 15-cent handkerchief adorned with a reasonably good likeness of Jefferson.

Leaving her husband, Peggy took her place in the gallery. A wild confusion of voices sounded all about her, and a sense of imminent crisis seemed to pervade the atmosphere. When a gavel was pounded from the rostrum the chatter did not altogether die out, and not all the people present rose in deferential tribute as Jackson was introduced.

"Gentlemen," began the President, "you are all aware of the significance of this great day, the birthday of that illustrious American, Thomas Jefferson.

"And a good States' righter!" shouted a heckler from the upper tier.

A buzz of excited comment broke out. It appeared that at any moment a bomb might be set off, breaking up the gathering in disorder, and perhaps shattering the bonds of Union at the same time. But Jackson had never had a firmer grip on himself, never before had he felt it so vital to impress his will and personality on his listeners.

"A good States' righter is a devoted servant of democracy," he went on. "From the depth of my heart I support these great words by a great American, Daniel Webster." He motioned toward Webster who was seated nearby. "This is what he said: 'When my eyes shall be turned for the last time toward the meridian sun, I hope I may see him shining on my united, free and happy country. I hope I shall not live to see his beams falling upon the dispersed structure of this glorious union. I hope to see, spread all over my country's flag, blazoned in letters of light and proudly floating above land and sea: "Union and Liberty, now and forever, one and inseparable!"'

An applause broke forth that almost shook the rafters! Peggy, her fears vanished, felt her eyes fill with tears. She tool the corsage from her dress and threw it on the platform before Jackson, as the entire assemblage joined in spontaneous and patriotic rendition of "Hail, Columbia."

When Peggy rested at home that afternoon, happy beyond words at Jackson's victory, Cuthbert, the old retainer at Franklin Inn, was ushered inside. He was obviously ill at ease.

"It's about Mr. Randolph of Roanoke, ma'am," he said. "They say 'e's dangerously ill. I thought I should let you know."

"Where is he?" cried Peggy.

Cuthbert drew out a slip of paper that he had already prepared. Peggy pressed his hand in gratitude. With an apprehensive backward glance he left. He was one of the few sensing Peggy's inmost secret.

Crossing to the desk, Peggy hurriedly penned a note to the one person she felt she could call on in that emergency, Rowdy Dow. "Rowdy, dear: You must help me. Ask no questions. Meet me at Gadsby's Inn . . . Warrenton . . . Coach . . . Five before nine tonight."

Fortunately, it was an overcast evening and there were no observers outside Gadsby's when Peggy arrived at the appointed time. Rowdy had a carriage ready and asked scarcely any questions as they drove toward the house that Randolph was occupying.

In Randolph's bedroom the sole attendant was an old family servant. He watched for every motion from the wounded man, and moved to his side at the slightest change of expression.

"What did the doctor say today?" asked Randolph.

"The doctor say yo' all goin' to git well, sah," was the answer.

"Braxton, you're the best friend and the worst liar who's ever served me," murmured Randolph, faintly smiling.

There was a scraping of wheels outside. The sick man turned slightly. His eyes went to the window, then remained at the doorknob. As she silently tried to enter the room Peggy saw that Randolph knew in advance of her presence, although he was too weak to make a gesture of welcome.

"Margaret," his voice issued ever so faintly, as she took a place beside him and smoothed his hair back.

"You couldn't keep me away, darling," whispered Peggy. He nodded his head, as Peggy dropped to her knees and put her arms protectingly about him.

"Perhaps," he said, gaining strength to speak, "if I hadn't been a fool all those years, this wonderful moment would never have been so perfect."

Peggy could say nothing, but her hands gently caressed him, and she pulled back a wisp of hair that had slipped over his forehead.

"I've loved you, darling," he continued. "Only because of you I have suffered an otherwise painful life. Now it's finished, but with a beautiful ending . . . you with me, at the end, to know that I love you."

Tenderly they kissed. Randolph tried to raise his head, so that he might look directly into Peggy's eyes.

"Smile for me," he said. She tried her best. "Now please go." Knowing that it was his wish, she obeyed. As she went through the doorway it was hard for her to keep control of herself, but on John Randolph's pallied face was a smile of new and utter contentment.

Peggy was still unable to speak when she came up to Rowdy in the driveway outside.

"How is he?" he asked anxiously.

"He's happy," said Peggy softly, when she was at last able to frame the words.

Out of the shrubbery, at one side, a shadowy figure emerged, Peggy gave a sharp gasp as she was conscious that she and Rowdy were not alone. Then she stared closely at the man who stood there.

It had been so many years since she had seen La Roy Sunderland that she had completely banished him from her thoughts.

Had she realized that he had been the medium to take from her the man she had always loved . . . but that was an incredibility that could not occur to her. Randolph had chosen to let no detail of his "accident" become public, and Sunderland was fully aware of this.

"What are you doing here?" asked Rowdy, stepping up to him.

Sunderland disregarded this question, and turned to face Peggy.

"You're a woman of means, Mrs. Secretary Eaton," he said cunningly. "I am poor. Surely your reputation in Washington will be worth a trivial consideration."

Rowdy, with an exclamation of fury, seized him by the collar. As Peggy gave a startled cry the two struggled, then fell on the roadbed.

Sunderland tore himself free, and, squirming to his feet, whipped out a pistol. Rowdy, seized his wrist, and when the weapon fell to the ground, retrieved it for himself.

Sunderland had one last resource. He brought a knife from an inner pocket and with a sudden charge rushed on the other. Perhaps it was purely self-defense, or perhaps something in Rowdy's subconscious mind told him that the man before him was a murderer by prior act. At any rate, he fired pointblank, and Sunderland fell.

Neighbors had already been attracted by the cries, and with the shot people came pouring from all directions. There was just time for one thing.

Pulling Peggy to the carriage, Rowdy gave a peremptory command to the negro driver. As two constables came up, the vehicle sped away.

Forcing Overcalls.

Even though the take-out double is a powerful bid, there are certain hands which are too strong for it. These hands are about equal to an opening two bid. When such a hand is held and an opponent opens the bidding, there are two types of overcalls available which are forcing to game; the forcing no trump overcall and the immediate overcall in the opponents' suit.

The forcing no trump overcall is forcing only after an opponent opens with a preemptive bid you simply had the same number of no trump. Now partner must show his best suit, and the bidding must be kept open to game.

When an opponent opens the bidding in a suit, an immediate overcall in his suit likewise is forcing to game and usually shows a void or the ace of the opponent's suit, although with particularly strong hands this bid may be made with a singleton.

♠AKJ7 ♥A ♦KQ105 ♣AQ73

you would bid two hearts over an opponent's opening bid of one heart; if the opponent's opening bid were four hearts, you would bid four no-trump. Two hearts also could be bid over an opponent's one heart, holding:

♠AKJ7 ♥6 ♦KQ105 ♣AKQ2

Bad Play Matches Bad Bidding.

To pick a good opening lead usually is not enough. It must be followed up. In today's hand, West made a fortunate opening selection, but he failed to capitalize it.

South, dealer.

	♥QJ753
	♦Q84
	♣Q73
WEST		EAST
♠KQ7		♠1098
♥10982		♥6
♦763		♦A52
♣KJ9		♣1086542
	SOUTH
	♠AJ653
	♥AK4

Obviously South's bidding was atrocious and, not unnaturally, landed the partnership in the wrong suit. It is true that he had a powerful hand and that he should have made a strong rebid over North's no trump response, but still it should not have taken the form of a jump to four spades with such a sketchy trump suit. If he had correctly bid three diamonds, North could have responded with three hearts, and in that way the correct contract of four hearts would have been reached. In the four spade contract, declarer had to get help from the enemy.

West hit on the good opening lead of the ten of hearts, which was won in the closed hand with the ace. Declarer now led the low trump from his own hand. He saw that unless the trumps split there was a slim chance of holding the trump loss to less than three tricks which in addition to the inevitable diamond loser, would be fatal. Therefore he played for a 3-3 trump split and, as some small measure of insurance, played away from his ace on the first lead.

West was caught napping. He should have seen that there was a real possibility of his partner's six of hearts, on the first trick, being a singleton. If that were true, it was vital for West to get on lead quickly and return a heart for East to ruff. Obviously nothing could be lost by the play of an honor on the first spade lead. It was inconceivable that East could hold the black ace, because that would place declarer with the J-10-9-8 seven times, a holding from which he certainly would not have led the three up to the four. When West carelessly played the seven spot on the first trump lead, East was forced to overtake, and now there was no way for East to get that precious heart ruff. East returned a club, which declarer won with the ace, and then the ace and another trump were led, after which declarer had to concede only the diamond ace.

Obviously, had West properly taken the first trump lead and continued a heart, East's ruff would have accounted for the fourth and setting trick.

Power Fete Diners to Use 300 Tables

9 Tons of China Ordered for Banquet Sept. 10 for Delegates.

27,000 Pieces of Silver, 6,000 Wine Glasses Are Needed.

By Dudley Harmon.

Statistics on the tons of china, the gallons of olives, and the thousands of pieces of silver to be used at the huge banquet to be held September 10 in Union Station for the 3,000 delegates to the World Power Conference meeting here that week, are breath taking.

"We picked Union Station because no other place in Washington is big enough," said Mr. T. C. Crump, one of the officials in charge of entertainment. "The benches in the waiting room will be moved to the concourse outside, and a partition is being erected to shut off the diners from the rest of the station. "Guests will be seated at 300 tables."

With the exception of 300 waiters, practically everything for the banquet will come from New York. The head of a restaurant chain there will entrain for Washington with 27,000 pieces of silver, nine tons of china and several bales of table cloths.

One thousand five hundred cantaloupes have been ordered for the first of the seven courses. Two kinds of wine will be served, requiring 6,000 wine glasses. For the entree, 600 lambs have been ordered in addition to 50 crates of celery, 75 gallons of olives, 300 gallons of soup, 5,000 rolls, 125 gallons of raspberry ice and 80 gallons of coffee. The food will be prepared in the station kitchen.

Several of the delegates from the 52 countries represented at the conference are beginnng to arrive in Washington. Sir Harold and Lady Hartley, of London, arrive today in New York. Sir Harold will come immediately to the Capital. Lady Hartley will join him here later.

The British delegation is headed by Viscount Falmouth, who will arrive September 5. He will be accompanied by the viscountess and they will stay at the Carlton, where many of the English and all of the Swiss delegates will live.

The Deputy Minister of Mines for Canada and Mrs. Charles Camsell will arrive early this week. They will stay at the Mayflower.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, will entertain at several private functions in honor of the Brazilian members of the delegation, which include Mr. Joao Marques dos Reis, minister of communications and public works. The minister will be accompanied by his daughter, Senora Carmen Josephina. They will make the northward journey from Rio de Janeiro by plane, arriving in Washington on Thursday. Because the embassy is still closed for the summer, with the furniture in storage, the minister and his daughter will stop at the Mayflower.

Rehoboth Slates V. I. A. Program

Mrs. Walter Nash, of St. Alban's, Will Provide Music for Show.

Rehoboth Beach, Del., Aug. 31.—A forthcoming event of unusual interest at the V. I. A. is the marionette show. Mrs. Walter Nash, well known Washington pianist, and wife of the organist of St. Albans Church, will furnish the music, and the Misses Anne and Christine Horn, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Egmont Horn, of Chevy Chase, Md., are giving a musical and an historical sketch.

Dr. and Mrs. Beveridge Miller had as their guests at their cottage on Columbia avenue, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Chase, Mr. Gordon Darlin, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Z. Miller.

Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate, Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy, is here for a short stay.

Col. H. H. Wingate and Mr. Sydney Wingate are stopping at the Henlopen, as are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dunlop and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Mahaffie and family, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Harper, Dr. Robert M. Harper and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Steck and family.

Judge and Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, of Chevy Chase, Md., will become permanent members of the summer colony here, having purchased property in Henlopen Acres on which they will build soon.

Commander and Mrs. Frederick Kaufman are occupying their new cottage on Henlopen avenue, which has just been completed.

Dr. Roberta White To Wed in Spring

Sister Here Announces Her Betrothal.

Miss Goldstein And Jacob Haas Wed in Capital

Roanoke Rabbi Unites D. C. Girl and Atlantan at Hotel Ceremony.

The wedding of Miss Lillian Goldstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Goldstein, of Washington, to Mr. Jacob Haas, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Arthur Haas, of Atlanta, took place yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel. Rabbi Maurice Goldblatt, of Roanoke, former home of the bride, performed the ceremony before an improvised altar banked with white lilies and gladioli.

The bride wore a wedding gown worn by the grandmother of the bridegroom. It was fashioned of ivory satin and trimmed with rose point lace. Her veil fell from a lace coronet, and she carried a bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The bride's mother was matron of honor, and the bride's sister, Miss Jeannette Goldstein, was maid of honor. Mrs. Goldstein wore a gown of aquamarine lace, and her daughter a frock of amethyst lace. Both carried roses.

Mr. Marcus Haas was his brother's best man, and Mr. Julius Goldstein, the bride's brother, and Mr. Milton Silver were ushers.

A breakfast followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Haas will live in Atlanta.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Julius Roskin, Mr. Milton Silver and Miss Carolyn Strauss, of Baltimore; Miss Julia Holstein, of Brockton, Mass., and Mrs. Henry Cohen, of Atlanta.

Miss Ernestine Loeffler will be maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Miss Myrta Bronson, Mrs. Paul DeWitt Fellows, sister-in-law of the bride-to-be; Mrs. C. Don Warnick and Miss Theo Heimerle.

Mr. Donald Pollock will be best man. Ushers will be Mr. Albert Crowell, Mr. Edward Hopper, Mr. John Thornberry, Mr. C. Don Warnick, Mr. William King and Mr. Paul Fellows.

Death of Father Defers Wedding of Miss Clark

Owing to the recent death of her husband, Mrs. Eleazer Winslow Clark has recalled invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Miss Virginia Clark, to Mr. Hopewell Wedd Darneille, jr. The wedding was to have taken place Saturday.

Mr. Darneille is the son of Mrs. Hopewell H. Darneille, of this city.

Eden Is Host To Lindsays At Luncheon

Envoy to U. S. and Wife Among the Guests of British Leader.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, who is vacationing in England, was among the guests at a luncheon given recently by the Foreign Secretary and Mrs. Anthony Eden at the Savoy, in London. The guests of honor were the Prime Minister of Egypt and members of the Egyptian delegation now in England. Noel Coward also was among guests. Sir Ronald will return to this country with Lady Lindsay sometime in October.

Plans for King Edward's coronation next May are causing much speculation in English society. The first instructions concerning ceremonial robes to be worn, issued by the Earl Marshal this week, announce that peers and peeresses are to wear the full coronation robes of their degrees but that peeresses will wear tiaras instead of coronets, as on previous coronations. Full dress instructions for all others invited to Westminster Abbey will be issued later.

According to another recent report from London, the Duke and Duchess of York have been guests of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, at Gannochy Lodge, for the grouse shooting.

Capital Women Enter Tourney

White Sulphur Springs Golf Play Attracts Many Washingtonians.

Many women members of Washington country clubs have arrived at White Sulphur Springs to take part in the Mason and Dixon golf championship, to be played on the Old White Course at the Greenbrier.

Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, wife of the Justice of the Supreme Court, with Justice Letts and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Letts, has arrived to compete in the tourney. Others are Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Washington, Maryland State champion; Mrs. Emery T. Smith, Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, Mrs. Herbert H. Moffitt, and Mrs. Landra B. Platt, who belongs to the Chevy Chase Club. Mr. Moffit and Mr. Platt accompanied their wives to White Sulphur.

Miss Wicks to Be Wed To Mr. Arthur C. Perry

Miss Katherine Williamson Wicks, who has been visiting in Washington, has returned to her home in Newark, N. J., but will be back in the capital in two weeks to prepare for her marriage to Mr. Arthur C. Perry, of Austin, Tex., and this city. The wedding will take place in October.

Miss Wicks formerly was connected with National Park Seminary at Forest Glen, Md. Her engagement to Mr. Perry was announced recently.

Mrs. Compton Smith Visiting in Capital

Mrs. Compton Smith, wife of Gen. Smith, is visiting Mrs. Dorothy Hartwell at her home here until Thursday. She is accompanied by her young daughter. Her son, who has been at camp in New Hampshire, will join her later this week.

Mrs. Smith lived her for several years when her husband was stationed in Washington. Gen. Smith, member of the national polo team, is ill at FitzSimmons Hospital, Denver.

N. A. Connor Attends Marriage of Sister

Mr. Neil Anthony Connor, of Washington, gave his sister, Margaret Foley Connor, in marriage when she was wed Thursday to Mr. John Tarrant Kenney, son of Mrs. John W. Kenney, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The ceremony took place in St. Bernard's Church, Tariffville, near Hartford, Conn.

Miss Virginia Mary Connor was her sister's maid of honor, and Mr. Richard Tarrant Kenney was best man for his brother.

Marriage Is Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Jones, of Waynesboro, Ga., announce the marriage of their daughter, Inez Wilkins, to Mr. Robert W. Gilliam, of Columbia, S. C. The wedding took place on the evening of August 19, in Washington, with the Rev. Allan F. Poore, officiating.

Leave for Ohio.

Mr. Lyle Brookover, with his sister, Miss Laura Brookover, is motoring to Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, to remain until after Labor Day. On their return, they will be accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Eva Kelly Brookover, who has spent the summer in Ohio.

Mr. Walker to Entertain.

Mr. Mannix Walker will give a dinner at his home tonight in celebration of his birthday.

Letters from Washingtonians in the Far East bring news of the American colony which centers around our embassy and its Ambassador Joseph C. Grew. Golf, strange to say, is the chief sport, with fishing a colse second in popularity so far as the Ambassador is concerned, who leads among the diplomatic fishermen of Tokyo.

All is not golf and fishng at the American Embassy, however, for correspondence tells one that the American Club started by a group of Americans with Edwin Neville, counsellor of the American Embassy, as leading spirit, is a rendezvous for dining, dancing and bridge in the colony.

Incidentally, a Department of State official, whose praises are being sung in many far-flung embassies and legations, is Mr. Keith Merrill, just now sojourning on the north shore, under whose direction come household equipment and supplies for these represetnatives of Uncle Sam in many lands.

Through Mr. Merrill's efforts the embassy in Tokyo has come into the possession of an attractive set of mellow gold and white porcelain, made in America, of course, with eagles and stars adorning it.

Coveted invitations to the Baltimore Bachelor's Cotillon to be held this year on December 7 will mean more than ever to the lucky Washington debutantes who receive them. It will be the first "big event" of their season now that politics is playing such havoc with Washington social plans and no one knows exactly what receptions there will be and when they will take place this season.

First choice will come, of course, to those debutantes whose mothers attended cotillon in other years. This group of those certain to be invited will include Miss Ruth Parker Dove, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carter Dove, whose mother was Miss Ruth Parker, a belle of Washington and Baltimore, and pretty Miss Harriet Parker, daughter of a popular Baltimore hostess, Mrs. Lous McKim and Mr. Myron Parker, of Washington, Mrs. McKim's first husband. Then there are Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, and Miss Martha Hendrick McKenna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royal McKenna, who will pass some of the time in Baltimore before the cotillon with her aunt, Mrs. Edgar Davis Edmonston. Another Washington girl who will attend the Baltimore cotillon is Miss Carlile Porter, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. David D. Porter, United States Marine Corps.

T. E. Vliers Back From Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Truman E. Vlier have just returned to their home in Takoma Park after their vacation spent with Mrs. Vlier's sister and her husband, Dr. and Mrs. E. V. Pyle, at their home in Middletown, N. Y.

During their visit Dr. and Mrs. Pyle entertained in their honor. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Nelson T. Murray, of Camden, N. J., and Mrs. Murray's mother and sister, Mrs. Bertha N. Yearsley, and Miss Virginia Yearsley, of Takoma Park; Dr. and Mrs. Wallace Mook, of Weehawken, N. J.; Dr. and Mrs. Clarence C. Holcomb, of Margaretsville, N. Y.; Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Kuntz, of Dover Plains, N. Y.; Dr. and Mrs. A. White, of Hopewell Junction, N. Y.; Dr. Helen Yarnell, of Washington, and Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. Kinne, of Middletown, N. Y. The doctors were all classmates in college.

Mr. and Mrs. Vlier celebrated their eighth wedding anniversary while they were in Middletown.

Mr. and Mrs. Manganaro Give Reception for Son

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Manganaro gave a reception yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the return of their, son, Dr. Paul Anthony Manganaro, who recently completed a course in surgery and medicine in the Regia Universita' of Italy.

He is the brother of Dr. Raphael N. Manganaro, Washington physician, and the Rev. Peter F. Manganaro, of New York.

Spring Valley Horse Show Is Set for Sept. 19

Plans are under way for the second annual Spring Valley Gold Cup Horse Show, which is to be held in Washington on September 19 as a charity event to aid blind residents of the city.

It will be held, as before, in the ring located at Fordham road and Tilden street, just off Massachusetts avenue extended, in Spring Valley. The all-day program will begin at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Dean M. Rathbun, manager and secretary of the successful meet held for Washington's destitute and blind last year, has been reappointed and he announced yesterday that many leading sportswomen and sportsmen will assist with arrangements.

The work of selecting committee members and assigning them to their various tasks will be completed this week, as will preparation lists of classes comprising the program.

The gold cup donated by Mr. W. C. Miller and Mr. A. N. Miller last year as a challenge cup for the show championship will again be in competition. The first "leg" on the trophy was won by King Dominant, handsome chestnut hunter belonging to Mr. and Mrs. George A. Plummer.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

NO ROMANCE of the young, sweet school on Park avenue? Is it only a flinty-eyed canyon where venal mamas parade their debutante daughters before bored young eligibles, and paunchy businessmen install blonde young minxes from the Broadway girl shows? Oh, the true romance turns up, now and then!

RUTH ZUCKERMAN.

I met Paul and Ruth Zuckerman in "21" a few nights ago—"Our 21" of Mary Astor's diabolical diary. They looked as blissful as they did the day they were married nearly seven years ago. Ruth was Ruth Taylor, remembered as the little golddigger in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Paul was a carefree young broker and playboy-about-town. I saw them meet for the first time, at a dinner party, and if love at first sight exists, that was it. You could fairly see the sparks! In a few weeks they were married. Now they have two fine children, and still hold hands under the table! Paul stopped his favorite clock at the hour and minute they met—and so it still stands in their Park avenue apartment! Sort of silly, but somehow nice, too.

• • • •

Are we really going to lose our greatest and most debonair man-about-town, William Rhinelander Stewart, who is pointed out by guides as the piu-perfect example of that strange ilk? Signs continue to point to a marriage with Janet Ryan, the blonde, poker-faced beauty from Washington who was recently divided from her spouse. If so, several Hollywood beauties will flood the studios with tears—and the guides will have to find another man-about-town!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Ginger Rogers has been in and about town the past week or so, holidaying after the heroic labors of making "Swing Time" with Mr. Freddy Astair. Ginger looks tired and bored—wears a shiny make-up and her curly pink (yes, pink) hair in a bob to her shoulders. I sat next to her and her party at a gay midnight restaurant a few nights ago, and Ginger's only conversational contribution came at 1 o'clock when she said, "I gotta go now. Gotta get up early tomorrow" . . .

The volcanic hat-maker Mme. Nicolle arrived from Paris the other day bringing a ferocious eagle so big that it had to be shipped at once to our zoo under strong guard. Nikki seems to be going mad for beasts. It was she who gave Mary Margaret McBride the nanny-goat whose arrival on the Normandie got more space in the paper than the arrival of 20 French fan dancers. Now Nikki can return to her felts . . .

• • • •

No widow in memory has taken it harder than Louise Van Alen Mdivani, whose husband Serge was killed on the polo field last March, six weeks after their marriage. I saw her at Grand Central the other day, gliding to a train like a black ghost, wearing a heavy black crepe veil that hung to the hem of her black dress. And clutching a jewel case!

What do we American women want in our new homes, now that building is beginning again in a modest way? A local organization set about finding out, and here are some of the interesting things they dug up.

We are now ready to have our houses turned around, with the living quarters facing the back garden rather than the street. The front porch is defunct, and we now prefer a side porch or a shady back terrace on which the living room opens. The one-bathroom house, except for very small cottages, is out—there must be two baths upstairs and one down, if possible. The master's bedroom is no longer just another upstairs room, but must have a private bath and, if possible, a connecting dressing room. We are not quite ready for modern architecture, but we like simplified versions of sturdy American styles. Above all, our kitchens must be absolutely up to the minute, with the best of all the labor-saving devices.

Woman's Life Span Increased 12 Years

Average Now 63, Against 59 for Men.

New evidence that modern women may expect to live longer than men was presented recently by Dr. Herbert B. Kennedy, assistant medical director of the Woodmen of the World Life Association of Omaha, Nebr., speaking at the twenty-third annual National Fraternal Congress of America at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Explaining that in the last 30 years the extension of life has been increased for men by 11 years and for women by 12 years, Dr. Kennedy further pointed out that statistics indicate that the average life of a man is now 59 years and of a woman, 63.

High blood pressure, kidney trouble and hardening of the arteries in middle life increase death rates, he said, adding that this makes it imperative for insurance companies to hire competent doctors to examine clients and obtain case histories and family histories.

Smart Formality for Daytime

Following the trend for masses of flowers atop the head for formal evening, a noted designer has created the lovely afternoon hat of black net above, simulating a huge flower. To complement the smartly delicate chapeau, a three-strand choker necklace of pearls encircles the throat. Pearls in natural, copper, bronze, beige and gunmetal effectively accent all-black ensembles.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Brave Little Women.

"Don't tell me you're staying in town this summer?"

"Yes, we're simply too hard up to go anywhere . . . you know, with taxes and everything——"

"Don't tell me! We're virtually on relief. Do you know what it cost to send the boys to camp this summer? Five hundred dollars!"

"Well, Gracie had to have so much for graduation . . . you know how girls are . . . and her father had promised her a little roadster——"

"Well, of course, you can't raise children like heathens."

"No, and you've always got to sacrifice for them. That's what I thought about staying in town this summer. I just told Jim Gracie would need so many things for college—especially with rush week and all—we might as well stay here and just take week-end trips to the mountains and the beach."

"Well, of course, we'll take a little cruise or something like that . . . we had thought about having the house air-conditioned, but it costs so terribly much——"

"Cost! Did you ever see anything like the way prices are? I've been looking at fur coats . . . I'm simply dying for a new Persian lamb, but I guess I'll have to wear my old squirrel another season."

"My Hudson seal's simply in tatters . . . I've worn it three whole seasons. But I just don't see how——"

"My, wouldn't it be nice to have a lot of money and buy all the clothes you wanted?"

"Would it? Say, I wouldn't know how to wear decent clothes any more. I've gone without things so long. And the house—honestly, I'm ashamed for anyone to see the rugs. Of course, we simply had to have new draperies."

"Well, I never have let myself go the way I have in the last year. But the special taxes nearly ruined us . . . you know I've been without a second girl all summer."

"I haven't had decent help for a year . . . you can't get it any more. It's just as George says—labor's so independent you can't touch it with a 10-foot pole."

"Well, it looks to me that with all the people out of work——"

"They don't want to work, that's what's the matter with them. Just lazy. No initiative. I just passed a bunch of ditch diggers up here . . . I wish you could have seen them. They were almost leaning on their shovels."

"Well, it's more trouble than it's worth to bother with help any more. It makes me too nervous. Especially in the heat. I think maybe after Gracie goes to college Jim and I will move into a hotel."

"Say, hotel life'll kill you . . . after having your own home and everything."

"I know, but what are we all going to do? As Jim says, it takes a millionaire to afford a home these days. Besides, it takes so much out of you to look after a house—especially a big one. Do you know how long I've been keeping house? Eighteen years. I tell Jim I need a rest."

"I need a rest, too. I've never suffered from the heat as much as I have this summer."

"Well, it's simply inhuman to expect anyone to stay in this climate in the summer time. I don't blame everyone for getting out of it. You know there's simply nobody in town . . . scarcely a soul . . . I tell Jim I feel like Robinson Crusoe."

"Well, I could never have stood it if I hadn't been awfully careful about myself. I'm simply not doing a thing, just lying around under the electric fan and drinking fruit juice. I even have my breakfast in bed."

"That's the way with me. I've just loafed around and relaxed. As I tell Jim when you're in the tropics—that what this virtually is—you've just got to slow down and take it easy."

"Well, this is the first summer we've ever stayed here. But now that it's almost over I'm really glad to have had the experience. I guess a little hardening up is good for us."

"That's what I say. People that never know any hardship never amount to anything."

Two New Shades.

Paris, (AP).—A new brick shade called soudan red has emerged from Lanvin's, as well as myrtle green. Fox furs dyed soudan red are striking. Other furs link black ermine and white fox. Starred materials included spangled wools, tweeds, duvetine satins, taffetas and many sheer evening crepes.

Gives Turkish Effect.

Paris (AP).—Low-looped skirt draperies produce Turkish trouser effects in replacing trains. Sphinx head veils encircle the face or form Bertha collars when dropped around the neck.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Who Has Crush on Movie Actor Having Trouble With Her Boy Friend as Result; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: I have been going around with my boy friend for three years now and we never had a fight until this summer. You see, I just adore Robert Taylor in the movies and of course I guess I do talk an awful lot about him. Why, after I have seen one of his movies, I can't go to sleep for hours at night. Well, my friend gets sort of jealous of him and then gets mad at me. He has absolutely refused to take me to see him again, no matter what show it may be. Now, don't you think that's silly?

• • • •

I realize I'll never even see Robert Taylor off the screen, but I just can't bear to miss one of his movies when it comes to town. He is so divine and I think every girl should have her chance at least to get a look at him once in a while. His new picture, "His Brother's Wife," will be here this week an dthe boy friend says that he not only will not take me, but that if I go, he will never speak to me again.

• • • •

I don't know what to do. This boy really is a swell fellow, although of course he has none of the looks of Robert Taylor. Still I don't want to break with him and I am afraid if I give in to him now he will think he can always have his own way. Should I just go and tell him that I didn't? I'll just die if I don't see that picture—I know I will. Please let me know what to do right away. I'm so worried. I'll watch your column every day until I see the answer. Gratefully, PENNSYLVANIA READER.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR PENNSYLVANIA READER: The thing to de here is to try to look at this situation through your boy friend's eyes. Then you may better understand and more easily forgive his feelings in the matter. How would you feel if he constantly raved and tore his hair about some movie actress? Isn't it likely you would be hurt and jealous and annoyed? Wouldn't you think he was showing poor taste, to say the least, in dwelling on the superlative attractions of another girl while in your company? I am confident it wouldn't be long before you would be telling him to "Shut up" when he mentioned her name, and it is very likely you would soon develop a passionate dislike for whatever pictures that particular siren might be appearing in. You might not forbid him to go to such pictures, but I'll wager you would refuse to go wtih him to see them.

• • • •

Now, if I were advising your boy friend, rather than you, I believe I would tell him to pretend a crush on Greta Garbo or Myrna Loy; Alice Faye or Simone Simon, and match your every sigh for Robert Taylor with two sighs for his screen heroine. I believe that would be the best cure for your silly infatuation.

• • • •

You must be a rather selfish and cowardly sweetheart to suppose that "giving in" to your beau in this instance will make you his slave for life. There is a law of give and take in human relationships which makes it necessary ever and anon for one to give special consideration to the other's wishes. Your beau would be a man of pretty mean spirit if he were weakly content to play second fiddle in your affections to a shadow on a silver screen. If, after three years' devotion, he now puts his foot down on taking you to any more movies which have a tendency to make you act like a blathering idiot, I think you will be showing good common sense in agreeably submitting to his dictate. After all, somebody should take you in hand, and you should be grateful to this youth for having the intestinal investiture to do it.

M. H.

Woman Seeks "Adoption."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Do you know anyone who wishes to adopt an orphan—a middle-aged orphan who would appreciate the opportunity of becoming an honest, loyal, thoroughly reliable helper in the home? I would like to be adopted into the sort of home where an educated woman is needed as companion—companion secretary, companion housekeeper, traveling companion, or for any other work which could be done by a sympathetic, congenial, settled woman.

• • • •

I have done office work in various parts of the United States and am accustomed to meeting people. I was employed as secretary by a Justice of the Supreme Court in Denver, Colo., years ago, and was often a guest in his home. I have letters of recommendation from him and from other distinguished persons. Salary would be no object, as I will have money later from an estate. Am wanting a home where I can be of use and have some time to myself for some literary work I am interested in. If you can get me in touch with someone interested in such a proposition, I shall be indebted to you for life. Thanking you, I am, very truly yours, LOUISE M. A.

• • • •

DEAR LOUISE M. A.: I know of no one wishing to adopt a middle-aged companion into the family. But it is possible the publication of your letter will bring you some response. If so, mail will be forwarded.

1-3 as much pineapple as potato
1-3 cup honey
¼ cup hot water

Boil the potatoes with the skins on. When cool, peel and cut them in pieces one-quarter of an inch thick. Mix honey and hot water. Just cover the bottom of a baking dish with the mixture, add the sweet potatoes and sliced pineapple. Pour the remaining honey mixture over them and bake for 10 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit).

Youth of Sixteen Needs Freedom

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"GEORGE doesn't obey me any longer. He is defiant, refuses to do as he is told, goes to bed late, is irregular at meals, and often does not come home at nights until long after the family is in bed."

Well, how old is George? What is insubordination at 10, or even at 14, may be justifiable assertion of one's rights at 17 or 18. Parents are prone to forget this. They continue to look upon Tom or George or Harry as a little boy long after he has really entered man's estate.

If they insist on trying to control an adult human being by the same methods they used with the small boy, they are courting revolt and ultimate defeat.

By the time a boy is 16, he should feel free to come and go as he pleases. If he has not by that time been trained in health habits, thought of others and self-control he never will be. Better to give up the fight at once, and let him work out his own problems.

He may injure his health, fall down on his work, upset the household, but the time to control him with rules and regulations which he does not wish to obey is gone, and any effort to enforce them will only increase his defiance.

The object of teaching children good habits is not to save one's self present worry, but to prepare them for life. For that reason rules should be few and sensible, and should be constantly re-adjusted to meet the child's development, and eventually relaxed as the child undertakes conscious control of his own life.

Traffic Takes Lives of Five In City Area

Many Hurt in Crashes; 3 Hit-and-Run Cases Are Reported.

Five persons, one the foreman of the United States Bureau of Fisheries shad hatchery on the Potomac, died in auto accidents in and near the Capital yesterday. Many others were hurt seriously.

The dead:

James Graham, 19, McLean, Va.

Lew McPherson, 34, colored, Rockville, Md.

Gilmore Brown, 40, of Grinnell, Md.

Pelot was driving south on United States Route No. 1, near Alexandria, about 5 this morning when a truck collided with his car. The impact drove Pelot's car against a bank.

Pelot was taken unconscious to Alexandria Hospital. He suffered fractures of the skull and thigh. He died about 9 p. m.

Mary Emma Shelby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Finnis Shelby, 2514 North Harrison street, Arlington, Va., died in Georgetown Hospital yesterday morning of a fractured skull and other injuries. She was run down near her home at 1:30 a. m. yesterday as she and her mother and younger brother, Arthur, 6, were returning after a trip to Washington.

Mrs. Shelby and her two children had alighted from a bus at Leissly's nursery, about 200 feet from the foot of Harison street, on which they live.

Unable to Read License.

A truck, sweeping past them from behind, struck Mary, who was walking on her mother's left side, and knocked her against Mrs. Shelby. The mother, who suffered a minor injury to her left elbow, reported to police that the truck was traveling at a high rate of speed, and that she was unable to read the license plate.

After a few minutes a passing motorist picked up Mary and her mother and took them to Georgetown Hospital, where the child died a few hours later. The boy was unhurt.

Graham died last night at Gallinger Hospital, where he was taken after having been injured in an automobile accident near Largo, Md., yesterday afternoon. He had suffered a punctured lung and other internal injuries.

In the same accident Fred Weakley, 18, also of McLean, suffered cuts on the left leg. He was treated at Gallinger.

McPherson died in Georgetown Hospital last night from injuries suffered in an accident on the Rockville Pike near Gaithersburg, Md., early yesterday morning.

Gilmore Brown died at Montgomery County General Hospital as the result of injuries suffered Saturday night when he was struck by a car operated by Nelson Hobbs, of Ellicott City, Md., near Grinnell.

Hobbs took Brown to the hospital. He said the man walked into the path of his car. Maryland State police of the Laurel sub-station are investigating.

In Post Three Years.

Pelot had been foreman of the shad hatchery at Fort Belvoir for about three years. Before that he had been connected with Harvey's Restaurant in Washington.

The driver of the truck, L. F. Pinkston, of High Point, N. C., and C. E. Cox, owner of the truck, a passenger, were both treated at Alexandria Hospital for lacerations.

Pinkston was arrested and released after furnishing $1,000 bond for appearance in Police Court today. An inqust in the case has been set for noon today.

Pelot leaves his wife, a son, Edwin, jr., 8, a brother, Lynn Pelot, of Washington, and his mother, Mrs. Annie Pelot.

Other Hit-Run Cases.

In addition to the Arlington accident, there were two other hit-and-run cases yesterday.

Florence Brown, colored, 28, of 5210 Eastern avenue northeast, was treated at Freedmen's Hospital yesterday for rib injuries suffered in an automobile accident at Fifth and P streets northwest.

While standing behind a parked atuomobile at Twelfth and R streets northwest, Alexander Jackson, 40, colored, of 1425 T street northwest, was struck by a passing auto the driver of which fled. Jackson was taken to Freedmen's Hospital and treated for a fracture of the leg.

Thomas F. Maher, 80, of 5100 Kansas avenue northwest, a retired Government Printing Office employe, was in a serious condition in Providence Hospital from injuries suffered when he was struck by a truck operated by Max Dorsch, of 809 Fourth street northwest.

Dorsch was traveling west on Sherman Circle.

Maher was taken first to Walter Reed Hospital and later transferred to Providence.

Vernon Harris, 21, who lived on Columbia road in Arlington, Va., was treated at Georegtown Hospital for lacerations of both legs and feet after the truck he was operating overturned on the Wilson boulevard in Cherrydale, Va.

When the motorcycle he was riding skidded in 3200 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, William Hallford, 27, of 1416 East Capitol street, suffered cuts on the right arm and head, and injuries of the left ankle. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital in a passing automobile.

Two were injured in an accident yesterday afternoon at Cheltenham, Md.

Joan Stafford, 38, of 1510 East Capitol street, was taken to Providence Hospital with internal injuries. Her condition last night was reported serious.

James W. Rollins, 40, of Brandywine, Md., injured in the same accident, also was taken to Providence Hospital, suffering from scalp injuries and cuts to the face. His condition was said to be critical.

Seven Hurt in Collision.

Seven persons were injured yesterday when cars operated by Clifton Freed, of Frederick, Md., and William St. Clair Magruder of Rockville, Md., collided near Clarksburg, Md., on the Frederick Pike.

Those injured are: Clifton Freed, Frederick, Md., bruises and cuts on legs, right hand, left wrist and head; Mrs. Doris Freed, his wife, 23, of Frederick, lacerations, face and lip; Patricia Ann Freed, six months, injury to head; Joan Allen, 6 years, bruises on body; Leonard Donovan, Brunswick, Md., cuts and bruises head and knee, and Mrs. Emma Donovan, 37, Brunswick, fracture of the left arm and left ankle and lacerations on forehead.

Those hurt were passengers in the Freed car. They were taken to the Frederick City Hospital for treatment.

Magruder, who was charged with driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, is watchman at the Bethesda dispensary of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board. He was taken to Montgomery County General Hospital where he was treated for fracture of the left arm and crushed chest. His condition was believed not critical.

Farnsworth Health Is Reported 'Good'

Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth, in the District Jail awaiting trial on charges involving the sale of United States Navy secrets to Japanese naval officers, seems to be in no worse health than when he was first confined six weeks ago, his attorney and a jail official said yesterday.

It had been rumored that the former naval officers might never be brought to trial because of mental and physical ailments and that he might soon be sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

"He seemed to be in pretty good health when I saw him this morning," said Capt. C. S. Fling, who was in charge at the jail yesterday.

When Attorney William E. Leahy, counsel for Farnsworth, was asked if his client seemed on the verge of a mental breakdown, he said:

"He's been on the verge of one ever since I've known him."

Asked if Farnsworth's condition had become worse since his confinement in the jail, Leahy replied:

"Well, it hasn't become any better."

Penitents Strut the Glory Road After Muddy River Mops Up Sin

After the muddy waters of the Potomac had washed away their sins, dozens of newly baptized colored converts to the United House of Prayer for All People yesterday donned white robes and joined their "saved" brothers and sisters in a parade.

With proudful strut, the jangle of tambourines, a great waving of banners, and the brassy music of bands, they showed satisfaction over their salvation.

Out in front marched their spiritual overlord—Bishop Charles M. Grace—resplendent in cream-colored cutaway suit, wide-brimmed panama hat, and shirt of jacquard design with matching tie and handkerchief.

In the morning at the river the bishop, head of a chain of 58 prayer houses along the Eastern seashore, was in a humble and reverent mood as he immersed first one sinner and then another. But in the afternoon he exulted among his washed flock. He sent them here and there, shouting:

"Step along, now. Spread out, spread out there. Let's make this parade look like something. Let's make it look big. Come on now, step along."

And the members of the flock—those who had found salvation yesterday and those who had found it in previous visits to the river—stepped along.

There were the women of the Grace Missionary Band, wearing white dresses with red-banded yellow hats and red and yellow flowing ties. There were the members of the Grace Tambourine Band, seated on a streamer-decked truck, and the children of the Grace Rhythm Band attired in tan and brown uniforms.

There were girls in pastel evening gowns, with a woman in the center wearing a gold paper crown, a gold-colored dress and gold sandals. These were the Grace Junior Ushers, carrying bouquets in the manner of bridesmaids.

There were Girl Scouts in brilliant blue, and Girl Scouts in khaki. There were men in yellow satin shirts and chromium doughboy hats. And there were the bishop's aids, one in full dress with silk topper, the others in fancy uniforms.

"Look at'm truckin'," said spectators who lined the curbs as the parade crossed Sixth street northwest and proceeded down M.

"Just look at'm truck," others along the curb took up the cry. "That boy sure is joyful today."

The loose-jointed, long-legged figure in the tail coat and silk topper continued to prance along, and at a nod from the bishop made the procession move a little faster or spread out or slow up a bit.

Some of the penitents who had just given up their sins to the Potomac rode in decorated automobiles or crowded buses. But most of them walked, their faces shining above their white garments, with pale blue rosettes pinned on the right shoulder.

Among the spectators were several who had been almost persuaded to seek salvation.

"I'm going to be baptized myself next time they does all this," said a plump woman with two children clinging to her skirts. "I'm going to get myself saved next time the bishop has a baptizing."

"If they have a parade next summer, I might get baptized myself," ventured her companion as the last of the white-robed flock trudged by.

Chairman Winant Lists Ten Public Services Available Here.

In the year that the social security act has been in operation the District of Columbia has received from the Social Security Board more than $350,000 for public assistance to the needy aged, needy blind and dependent children. The District also has received $63,773 for administration of its unemployment compensation law.

These figures were revealed yesterday by John G. Winant, board chairman, on the first anniversary of the act, which became a law last August.

"Aid to approximately 6,700 needy persons has been made possible through allowances to the District for public assistance to its needy dependents, matched by equal or greater funds provided by the District itself," Winant said.

He pointed out that since the District was among the first jurisdictions in the country to become eligible for all benefits of the social security act, its residents may now receive ten public services.

Lists Ten Services.

These are, assistance to the needy aged, aid to the needy blind, aid to the dependent children in their homes, unemployment compensation, maternal and child-health services, vocational rehabilitation, public health services, and Federal old-age benefits.

Under provisions of the act, the District is able to give assistance to many more persons, Winant said. He explained that in 1934, the year before the passage of the act, only 720 dependent children in 209 families received aid while in June of this year the District assisted 4,199 dependent children who were members of 1,533 families.

"In the case of the aid to the aged and the blind," he said, "the District had no laws for the payment of regular allowances to such persons until 1935, and the legislation enacted in that year provided that the actual payment of allowances would be contingent upon the receipt of Federal aid under the terms of the social security act.

"With Federal aid, the District has for the first time been able to provide regular maintenance to needy aged or blind persons. At least 2,500 aged men and women and 34 blind individuals have already received aid."

Numbers Due to Rise.

These numbers will be materially increased, when the plans are in full operation, District officials believe.

Children who have received aid because they are deprived of a parent's support are not being placed in institutions, but are being cared for in homes provided by relatives who otherwise would not have been able to care for them, the board chairman said.

In addition, the District has received more than $23,000 from the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor for services to mothers and children.

According to Winant, funds granted the District for administration of its unemployment compensation law are paying all proper costs of establishing a system which will afford protection to 75,000 employes when benefits become payable.

The District, he said, also is receiving under provisions of the act sufficient aid to extend the public health services administered by the United States Public Health Service and to increase the vocational rehabilitation administered by the Office of Education, Department of the Interior.

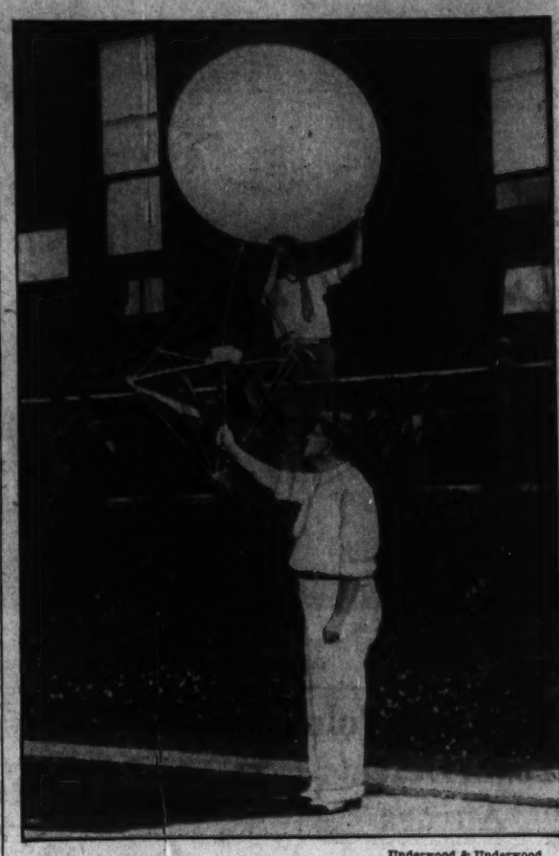
To Feel the Pulse of a Hurricane



Underwood & Underwood.

With this balloon and a recording device, the Weather Bureau hopes to gain more knowledge of hurricanes. A. H. Mears, meteorologist, holds the instrument, while Kils Anderson, scientific aid, waits for the signal to let go.

U. S. Prepares Devices in Effort To Reveal Hurricane Secrets

Tiny Kite-Resembling Outfits to Be Unloosed in Storms This Fall in Hope of Adding to Known Data on Disturbances.

With a kite-resembling outfit, equipped with tiny scientific devices, bamboo sticks and a gas balloon, the United States Weather Bureau is waiting for the fall hurricane season.

The bureau won't pull electricity out of the air, like Franklin. But if the season is a good one—and storms already are raging in the South Atlantic and Gulf area—much new information about what hurricanes are like probably will be found.

The instruments, the Weather Bureau said yesterday, have been sent to several weather stations in the hurricane zone and will be released when a storm breaks. Carried aloft to the heart of the hurricane, the outfit, which weighs a little more than an ounce, will register barometric pressure, temperature and humidity on a piece of smoked glass about the size of a postage stamp.

The delicate instrument is mounted to a framework of bamboo sticks, so that it will fall unhurt. An attached tag requests the finder to return it to the Weather Bureau.

The recorder has been used before by the bureau. Instruments have been picked up as far as 200 miles from the point at which they were released.

This year the job will be done much more thoroughly, as the bureau wants to draw some general conclusions.

How high, for example, does a hurricane extend? This will be told by the barometric readings on the instruments.

How much variation in temperature exists in the several altitudes affected by the storm?

What effect has humidity in the atmosphere on the air disturbance?

It will take many balloon "expeditions" from varying storm points to provide satisfactory answers to these questions. As many as 20 balloons are ready to be sent aloft at some of the stations, a weather official said yesterday.

The piece of smoked glass in the device works much like the paper charts on recording thermometers. The recordings are scratched, instead of written. The barometric pressure, humidity and temperature recordings will be made by three needles, movements of which are controlled by the weather instruments.

The device is said to have been developed in Belgium, where experiments during storms have been carried on for several years.

God's Rebuke Seen in Rise Of Dictators

Pastor Says 'Iron Rulers' Are 'Sign of Evil' in Modern Life.

Man-made dictators will be used by God as instruments of rebuke and chastisement, the Rev. Ewart E. Turner, minister of the American Church in Berlin from 1930 to 1935, told his congregation in union services at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church yesterday morning.

Mr. Turner spoke on "God's Use of Dictators" before the service in which All Souls' Unitarian and National Universalist Memorial Church co-operated with Mount Pleasant Church.

"The religious man abhors the presence of Mussolinis, Hitlers and Stalins in the world," the preacher said. "But he welcomes these dictators in so far as their existence reveals a condition of society that calls for rebuke an dredemption. Since an created man, God will use them as instruments of rebuke and chastisement.

"God's Judgments."

"The religious man does not say that God causes; he says that man causes evils, and that evils are indications of lessons ye: to be learned. Evils are judgments of God brought upon mankind because of man's misuse of freedom."

The former German minister said social injustice in Christian lands is being haughtily rebuked by men in Russia who disclaim belief in God.

"In Germany national honor is being restored by might," he added. "Italy's glittering political pageantry is gradually weaning Christian youth away from the church, rebuking religion for its silence before the immoralities of the state. Religion is one of the most discussed subjects in Germany today, whereas five years ago it scarcely was known to exist."

As a result of the Protestant struggle with pagan forces in Germany several gains wil lemerge, according to the minister. The church will see the impossibility of its official relation as a state church, he predicted, and will learn to accept ethical responsibility for the scrutiny of the acts of the state.

Against State Aid.

"The church will find that it is possible to trust spiritual resources for its needs. The church in Germany is still support deby taxation, the machinery of which is furnished by the state. Theoligical seminaries are state-supported in Germany. We are told that if this were not so the church would not be able to survive. Already powerful influences in the oppositional church in Germany are urging a complete separation from the state in all financial matters. The favorable results of free-will giving have been demonstrated by the free churches of the Reich.

'The religious man takes the long view of history. He writes God into the present, and declares with the Palmist that 'surely the wrath of man shall praise God.'"

Nats Take Two Games From Browns, 5-4, 7-4, With Late Rallies

3d Place Now Only 1 Game Removed

Ben Chapman Drives In Winning Scores in Both Contests.

Cascarella and Newsom Turn In Victories for Griffmen.

By Shirley Povich,
Sports Editor of The Post.

The Nats had the correct formula yesterday. Permitting the Browns to set the early-inning pace in both games of the double-header, Washington's athletes unloosed a pair of mighty stretch finishes, won both battles and today are greeted with a far more cheerful picture of the American League standings.

They snatched that first game from the Browns, 5 to 4, and then staged another snatch act by a 7-4 score to haul themselves within whispering distance not only of the first division but of third place.

Their double victory was most opportune, inasmuch as the White Sox were losing a double-header at New York, the Tigers were dividing with the Athletics and the second-place Indians were taking two on the chin up at Boston. This morning finds the Nats only a single game removed from both fourth and third place.

Ben Chapman was present in a grand manner at Griffith Stadium in both games. Aside from tying the score with a triple in the first game and driving in the winning run with a single, he was comparatively inactive—until the second game, when another triple off his bat sent three runs clattering across the plate and lifted Washington to its double victory.

The Nats were forced to come from behind three times in that first game, when the Browns were scoring with more or less consistency against Joe Cascarella. But they had a comparatively easy time of it in the second game when they had to come from behind only twice.

Until the sixth inning of that second game, the result was very much in doubt until Chapman cleared matters up satisfactorily with his triple at a time when the bases were loaded. One Jack Jachuchi, a rugged Bohemian from the Texas League, was making his first start in the majors and doing a very good job of it while Buck Newsom was being victimized by a Texas League hit that accounted for two precious Brownie runs.

Browns Take Lead.

Newsom set the Browns up in a 1-to-0 lead in the second inning when he pitched a triple to West and a single to Bottomley, but the Nats got that run back for him in the third inning when Millies launched with a double to left.

Just when it appeared that Newsom would escape a precarious fifth inning after a pair of singles and a walk had filled the bases with one out, Julius Solters dumped a looping pop fly over the infield and the Brownies took a 3-to-1 lead.

Jachuchi had permitted the Nats only three hits in the first five innings, but he had showed a trace of wildness which hit him hard in the sixth. A pair of walks and his own error on Hill's sacrifice bunt filled the bases with none out, but the 7,500 fans groaned when Kress tapped a ball back at Jachuchi, who threw to the plate forcing Stone and Kress was doubled at first by the catcher's throw to Bottomley.

At this point, Manager Hornsby chose to walk Millies intentionally, but by that time it had become habit-forming with Jachuchi who also walked Newson and forced a run over the plate. Against Chapman he worked the count to 2 and 2 before Chapman banged his triple against the wall in left center to send Hill, Millies and Newson scurrying across the plate with the runs that put the Nats in a 5-3 lead.

Against Al Thomas they picked up another run in the seventh when Kuhel doubled and their seventh run in the eighth when Red Kress lifted a home run into the leftfield seats, but those were entirely superfluous tallies, with Newsom holding the Browns to a single hit in the last four innings and registering his seventh and eighth strikeouts of the game against a pair of pinch-hitters in the ninth inning.

Nothing-ball Ivy Andrews found himself in a 1-to-0 lead against Joe Cascarella in the second inning of the first game when Cascarella pitched a single to West and a triple to Bottomley, but Bluge, Millies and the Nats' pitcher, himself rapped out singles in the third to tie the score before a man was out.

Fans Lend a Hand.

The gallery helped the Nats to take a 2-to-1 lead in the second, when an overzealous fan knocked in the third-base boxes Millies' descending pop foul out of Catcher Giuliano's mitt. Whereupon, given another chance, Millies drove over a run with a single.

Back into a 3-to-2 lead bounced the Browns in the fifth, when Lary doubled, Clift walked, Solters singled and Bell doubled to left. But it was 3 to 3 before the Nats were done with the inning, Chapman scoring on Kuhel's single after he had battered a triple to left.

Out in front for the third time went the Browns in the seventh, when little Harlan Clift boomed a home run into the leftfield seats and thus the game wore into the eighth with the Browns in a 4-to-3 lead.

Carl Reynolds carried the torch for the Nats' winning stand in the eighth when he beat out a single to Lary. Travis followed with a single to left and Bluege put the runners on second and third with a sacrifice. After Millies was intentionally walked to fill the bases, Jesse Hill, pinchhitting for Cascarella, brought the tying run home with a long fly to Solters. Ben Chapman won the ball game with his third hit of the battle, a single to left that scored Travis.

Pete Appleton was entrusted with the Nats' one-run lead in the ninth and the Browns never would have gotten anybody on base against him if Travis had not booted Bell's grounder, but Appleton slipped a third strike past Bottomley to seal the Nats' victory.

The Hero of Yesterday's Game in an Unheroic Predicament

Greentree Polo Team Defeats Aurora

Defending Titlists Win, 17-8, to Enter Semifinals in Overtime Tilt.

By the United Press.

Meadowbrook, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The pink-shirted riders of Greentree, defending champions, defeated Aurora, 17 to 8, as they and two other of the Nation's best polo teams smashed into the semifinal round of the United States open polo championship today.

Moving along with Greentree, which triumphed before 7,000 spectators on Meadowbrook's famed international field, were Texas and the Hurricanes. Texas whipped Roslyn, 10 to 9, in a bitterly fought game at Sands Point Field, Port Washington, N. Y., while the Hurricanes subdued an old Westbury team composed of three Argentines and one Englishman, 11 to 6, at Bostwick Field, Old Westbury.

Greentree Is Favored.

Greentree, which is favored to move into the final round, will meet Texas in one semifinal on Wednesday. The Hurricanes face the strong Templeton four, which drew a first-round bye in Wednesday's other semifinal. The winner of the final battle Saturday will become America's "Big Four" for the cup of the America's series starting September 19 against Argentina, the team which won the Olympic polo title several weeks ago.

The score of the Greentree-Aurora game was the most spectacular happening of the day. Last year Greentree was forced to battle through eight minutes of an overtime session before winning in the finals from Aurora. Today the Aurora riders were no match for Greentree because their sparkplug Seymour (Shorty) Knox, brilliant No. 1, did not play. His mother died in Buffalo last night and his place was taken by F. Skiddy von Stade.

Greentree, led by the tiny Pete Bostwick and Tommy Hitchcock, the world's only ten goal player, led from start to finish. Hitchcock, riding the No. 3 position, continually stole the ball from the opposition and then rammed it far down the field, where the fast-riding Bostwick would pick it up for a score.

45,000 Watch Giants Defeat Chicago Twice

By the United Press.

Carl Hubbell took the first game—his tenth straight victory—by holding the Cubs to one run. The score: 6 to 1. Mel Ott, Giant outfielder, helped New York win the second game, 8 to 6, by hitting his twenty-eighth home run of the season in the ninth inning. Spectators stood 20 deep in the outfield because of an overflow crowd. The attendance was 45,401.

Manager Charlie Grimm sent Big Bill Lee against the Giants in the opener, but the league leaders slammed him around in the second inning with three long hits and two runs that gave Hubbell enough lead to work on the rest of the game. It was Lee's ninth defeat in 23 games.

Two home runs by First Baseman Phil Cavaretta, benched for ten days for weak hitting, helped the Cubs to hold a 6-to-5 lead until the ninth inning of the second game when Southpaw Larry French pitched a home-run ball to Ott with two men on.

Donald Budge, Mrs. Fabyan In Finals

By the Associated Press.

Brooklin, Mass., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan and Don Budge, outstanding members of America's Wightman and Davis Cup teams, today gained the final round of the National Mixed Doubles tourney with Alice Marble, Palm Springs, Calif., and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Fabyan and Budge qualified for the last round by defeating Mrs. John Van Ryn, Philadelphia, and John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, Tex., 6—3, 6—2, but the California team moved in when the top-seeded team, Helen Jacobs and Wilmer Allison, the national single champions, defaulted.

When yesterday's program, which included final matches in the men's women's and veterans' division, was rained out, Allison left for his summer home in Maine. He will return here tomorrow, when he and Johnny Van Ryn will defend their national team title against Budge and Mako, the United States Davis Cup players, who were runners-up last year.

Allison and Van Ryn won their second doubles championships last year when they gained the final round for the fifth time in six years. Since then they have engaged Budge and Mako ten times without gaining a single victory.

Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Fabyan, the women's champions for the past two years, will strive for their third straight victory in that national tourney against Mrs. Van Ryn and Carolyn Babcock, of Los Angeles. Another pair of defending champions, Raymond Bidwell and Richard Bishop, of Boston, will oppose W. J. Clothier, Philadelphia, and Dwight F. Davis, Washington, in the veterans' team final.

Cards, Dodgers Divide Pair Of Games

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 30.—St. Louis divided a double-header with Brooklyn today and lost ground to the New York Giants in the National League pennant race.

After Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean allowed only seven hits as the Cards won the first, 6 to 3, a misjudged fly by Chick Fullis in the thirteenth inning of the second allowed George Watkins' blow to go for three bases and drive in Buddy Hassett with the needed run to give the Dodgers a 3-to-2 victory.

New York, winning two from Chicago, now is four games in front of the Cards, who are only a game ahead of the third-place Cubs.

Dean, winning his twenty-second game of the season and his seventh straight, had only one bad inning—the seventh—when the Dodgers got to him for three runs. Dean has lost eight.

Yanks Take 2; Flag All but Clinched

White Sox Beaten, 8 to 1, 4 to 1, New York Gets 16-Game Lead.

Need Only 11 Wins With 27 Tilts Left as Tribe Is Downed Twice.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—The Yankees all but sewed up the American League Pennant today, as they downed the Chicago White Sox in both ends of a double-header to shoot 13 full games in front of the rest of the loop.

Bump Hadley, the league's leading pitcher, won his twelfth game of the season in the opener, as the Yanks took an 8-to-1 decision. Monte Pearson won his seventeenth in the nightcap by a 4-to-1 margin, although both he and Vernon Kennedy pitched three-hit ball.

With the second-place Cleveland Indians dropping both their games to the Red Sox, the Yanks now have to play less than .500 ball to walk off with the pennant.

Both teams have 27 games remaining on their schedules. If the Indians won all of these, the Yanks would have to win but 11 to tie, which would be approximately .400 ball. For the season to date they have played at a .670 clip.

Bill Dickey's twenty-first homer, and a game-clinching six-run rally in the eighth inning put the opener on ice. Hadley allowed seven hits to win, while Ted Lyons was clubbed for 16.

In the nightcap, the Yanks did all their scoring in the seventh, with George Selkirk's homer featuring the game-winning assault on Kennedy, who lost his seventh start, compared to 18 victories. DiMaggio was on base when Selkirk poled out his round-tripper. The rookie sensation had tripled a moment before to score Red Rolfe, who had walked.

The only Sox run of the nightcap came as a result of Luke Appling's single, his stolen base, Joe Glenn's wild throw, a single by Minter Hayes. In the first game the Sox scored their lone run in the ninth on a pass and singles by Hayes and Luke Sewell.

Bennett Balloon Race Under Way

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, Aug. 30.—The twenty-fourth Gordon Bennett balloon race, minus an American entry for the first time, started today.

Ten balloons drifted toward the Northeast, with indications they would eventually land in the Baltic States or in Russia.

There were three German entries, three Polish, two Belgian, one Swiss, and one French.

The Warsaw newspaper, Gazeta Polska, has offered a new cup to replace the Chicago Daily News trophy which Poland captured last year through having won the race three consecutive years. The cup was designed by the Polish sculptor Stanislas Szukalski.

Dan Cupid and His Friends Are Fired by Maj. Neyland

By the Associated Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 30.—Campus romances make good reading for the sentimental, Maj. Bob Neyland said today, but henceforth when a University of Tennessee football player marries, he's fired forthwith from the team.

The retired Army major and present Tennessee football coach said "the falling in love business is a pain in the neck" and is practically worthless in building a he-man team.

"You get the team together for what you like to think is some wonderful coaching, and while you are talking and explaining your head off, you look over and see a boy with a goofy look on his face, gazing across the field at the empty bleachers, not hearing anything you are saying," Neyland explained.

"That means he's in love."

McPhails Finish in 2d Place in Field of 37 Teams.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 30.—Bobby Brownell, 17-year-old District Junior champion, and his dad, James V. Brownell, representing Indian Spring Country Club, won the first annual Maryland State Father and Son golf championship today at Five Farms course of Baltimore Country Club.

After going out in 39, the Brownells played the tough back side in 38, which included two deuces, four fours and three sixes.

The top-heavy favorites, the Peacocks, Roger, of Congressional, and his dad, Harry C., of Indian Spring, were third with 83-6—77. Ralph Quinter, sr., and jr., of Chevy Chase, had 88-11—77.

Charles McPhail, president of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association, and his son, Don, both of Baltimore Country Club, were second with 82-9—73.

R. T. and Burke Edwards, of Manor, scored 90-11—79, while another Washington team, A. D. Mills, sr. and jr., of Congressional, picked up.

Macks Take 1st, 5 to 4; Tigers Win 2d, 3-2

Opener Goes 12 Innings; Bridges Is Winner in Nightcap.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—The Athletics and Detroit Tigers divided a doubleheader today, the Macks winning the first game 5 to 4, in 12 innings and Detroit taking the second 3 to 2. Tommy Bridges outpitched Horace Lisenbee to take the nightcap.

Eldon Auker was the victim in the first game, when Wally Moses doubled, advanced to third on a safe bunt by Chubby Dean, and scored the winning run when Auker threw wild to third after fielding Dean's hit.

Charlottesville Loses Last Game of Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 30.—The Richmond Sports Club defeated the Charlottesville Elks here today, 10-5. It was the final game of the season for the local club and attracted a sizeable crowd.

Green, who started on the mound for the Elks, was hit hard, and was relieved by Lowry, who held Richmond scoreless after the sixth inning.

Fary and Robins led with the stick for the victors, collecting eight hits between them. Fary got two home runs.

Annapolis Is 3-2 Victor Over Frederick Nine

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 30.—Annapolis won, 3 to 2, from Frederick in a game full of thrills here this afternoon. Joe Porter outpitched Don Rice for the second time in the present series. The Washington lad, twirling for the locals, struck out nine batsmen and issued but two passes. Rice fanned but two and gave five bases.

Pirates Beat Bees Twice, 4 to 2, 3 to 1

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 30.—The Pirates defeated the Bees in both games of a double-header before 8,000 fans today, 3 to 1 in the second game and 4 to 2 in the first. Thompson hit a home run in a futile ninth-inning rally by the Bees in the first game and Brubaker hit a four-bagger in the fourth inning of the second with Suhr on base.

Strasburg Wins, 8-0, In Woodstock Playoff

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 30.—Blasting Jake Sheetz for seven runs in the first two innings, Strasburg coasted to an 8-to-0 victory over Woodstock, to tie the play-off series, the winner of which will meet Mount Jackson for the championship of the amateur loop. Tim Artz held the losers to five hits and was never in serious trouble. Woodstock's only scoring threat was nipped by a fast double play.

John Battle Scores Ace At Farmington Course

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 30.—John S. Battle, jr., local golfer and entrant in the recent sectional amateur golf tournament at Richmond, scored a hole-in-one on the Farmington Country Club course Friday afternoon. The feat was accomplished on the second hole of the rolling local course, a distance of 200 yards.

Battle was playing in a foursome composed of Judge J. W. Eggleston, John S. Battle, sr., State Senator from this district, and Lyttleton W. Wood, Commonwealth's attorney of Charlottesville.

Gallagher Ends Training for Levinsky

D. C. Fighter Believed in Better Shape and Frame of Mind Than Ever.

By Bill McCormick.

Marty Gallagher, local heavyweight pride, and King Levinsky, the Churlish Chicagoan, yesterday applied the finishing touches to long, strenuous training grinds with a wim and wigor that presages a merry war when they collide at Griffith Stadium tomorrow night.

Levinsky is in much better condition that he was last October when he dropped a much disputed decision to Gallagher. Marty, who has just returned from Boston where he was able to get some very good sparring partners, is apparently in the best shape of his entire career.

Natie Brown, former District heavyweight champion who holds several decisions over Gallagher, is only one of the authorities for the belief that Marty is in top condition. Natie should know — he worked with Gallagher yesterday.

"I have never seen Gallagher so vicious before," marveled Nathan. "He is just like a wildcat—a heavyweight wildcat. In the past, Gallagher has been in the habit of flurrying, then stepping back, dropping his hands and resting a bit. Now he is not resting, he's tearing in all the time."

Is Much Stronger.

"Not only that," says Brown, "Gallagher is stronger than I ever knew him to be before. I used to be able to handle him with ease in the clinches, but franky, he handled me pretty much as he chose in clinches in the gymnasium. He is throwing flocks of punches," and there is something on every punch."

Gallagher worked 12 rounds, topped off by 10 minutes of calisthenics, in his final workout. He boxed seven rounds against three sparmates, including Brown and Gus Mirman, an amateur light heavyweight. He stopped Mirman, but let up on the rest of his mates. Two rounds on the small bag, two on the heavy bag and one round of shadow-boxing, followed by the calisthenics, rounded out his program.

Levinsky, who is deadly serious about this fight, worked ten rounds on the closing day of his training siege. He performed against Johnny Pacek for three rounds, spent two rounds each on the light and big bags and shadow-boxed three rounds.

The King is in better mental shape than he was when he last fought Gallagher. The fight was Levinsky's first following his fiasco with Joe Louis—the one bad fight the King has made—and the Chicagoan's morale was badly shattered. Now the morale has been restored. Not only that, Levinsky is firmly convinced that he can beat Gallagher, and once the Kingfish becomes convinced he can defeat an opponent, he is a very difficult person to subdue.

Wagering continues brisk, with Gallagher still ruling a 5 to 7 favorite in most quarters.

Stoller

Has Had a Track Career Like a Racing Greyhound.

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 30.—Ever wonder what a racing greyhound thinks about as he tries to catch the mechanical rabbit at the dog track?

We did, so we decided to hunt up a subject for just such an interview. We didn't get a greyhound, but we did get in touch with Sam Stanley Stoller, University of Michigan sprinting star, because Sam knows.

For five years now, Sam has been chasing a "mechanical rabbit" over the cinderpaths. His name is Jesse Owens, the famed Negro flier from Ohio State. When Sam was a Sophomore in Hughes High School, Cincinnati, he caught and beat Jesse. But since that day he has tried something like 24 times over fast and slow tracks without success. Twenty-three of those races found Sam coming in like the fleetest greyhound on the tracks—a bang-up second.

"I'm the fellow you see in the movies of Jesse's foot races," laughed Sam, as pleasant and nice a fellow as ever pulled on a spiked shoe. "I'm the fellow that Jesse passes just before he hits the tape a winner. How does it feel? Well, for a time you feel a little discouraged, but then you know you are running against a perfect running machine, and come to the realization that being next best to perfection isn't half bad.

"Yes, I've probably seen more of Jesse's back than any man alive. And yet, he has given me some of my greatest thrills. Every man loves a winner, you know, even if he can't be that winner."

Sam still has one year of competition left at Michigan, and may be rewarded with brilliant victories, as Owens' decision to become a song and dance man may destroy his amateur status, leaving Sam with no "mechanical rabbit" to chase. Sam really can pick 'em up and lay 'em down, too. He has equaled the world record of 6.1 seconds in the 60-yard dash and has been clocked, unofficially, at 9.4 over 100 yards.

He won a place on Uncle Sam's Olympic 400-meter relay team, run on his twenty-first birthday, but was denied the right to run. Sam, a Jew charged he was a victim of politics and not racial prejudice. But now that he is back home, he is forgiving and forgetting it all.

Marlboro Assured Full Fields for Racing Opening Tomorrow

Stalls Filled At Nearby Track

Forty-six trainers are tightening up their charges today for the opening of the second lap of Maryland's fall racing season at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Over at Bowie, which is 6 miles away and which can be reached via excellent highways, 18 more have thoroughbreds in training for the five days' sport of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association. Others are quartered at Pimlico and Timonium, therefore, Race Secretary Edward J. Brennan won't lack for thoroughbreds with which to make up his seven-race programs daily.

Coming on the heels of the highly successful ten-day session at Cumberland, the sport promises to be the best in the track's history. Every one of the 70 winners at Cumberland, occupies a stall here or is quartered at Bowie. They got in on the B. & O. special which arrived early yesterday morning.

Horses Are Plentiful.

During a trip around the grounds this morning, General Manager Joseph B. Boyle, Assistant Manager Alton S. Jump, Race Secretary Edward J. Brennan, and Track Superintendent Dick Pending found the following trainers with thoroughbreds occupying stalls: Lloyd Sauer, R. J. Cremen, Harvey McHenry, John White, Herb Boorse, W. S. Sweeney, E. H. Gaines, Basil A. Hall, Fay Headlee, C. P. Miles, jr., J. Bowes Bond, J. L. Garthright, Henry Clark, W. Grater, Jim Hill, Mike Grant, and J. T. Engle.

Don Yates, Lionell Taylor, W. O. Seigert, Charlie Beall, G. A. Cook, Lou Jenkins, Bill Mein, Tom Lewis, R. Mitchell, J. E. Simmons, Mike Johnson, Jack Bishop, H. Shenski, Everett Brining, Harry Taylor, I. K. Mourar, Dick Westmoreland, R. L. Hanna, C. H. Fitzgerald, B. B. Archer, A. H. Utterback, Len Carver, Claude Costello, A. S. Bowman, James Arthur, Rhodie Campbell, and W. Hauhurst.

Checking over the Bowie contingent, Track Superintendent Dick Pending found the following trainers quartered there: A. K. Bennet, H. C. Brimmer, J. Gulsak, W. Reeves, W. Magruder, D. Riddle, H. Chapman, C. Wade, M. Capra, C. Bock, Walter Simpson, A. C. Yzquierdo, J. G. Davis, C. F. Hienicke, Mose Simon, M. V. Savis, and J. Hunter.

Eight Starters in Fields.

Tomorrow's opening seven-race program is headed by the Upper Marlboro Purse. This is a 5½-furlong sprint, for 3-year-olds and upward. All fields will be limited to eight starters in order to insure cleaner racing.

Edward S. Welter, who did excellent work during the recent Cumland session, will be in the starter's stand this week. Welter will start all fields out of stationary stall gates located on the outside of the track.

The finest colony of race riders ever to appear here will don silks tomorrow, according to Jesse Bennet, custodian of the jockeys' room. Among the topnotchers slated to accept mounts are Sammy Palumbo, Cecil Coffman, Butsy Hernandez, Eddie Smith, Johnny Shanks, Leon Garrett, Frankie Cusimano, Al Tryon, and Raymond Booker.

In addition to the usual parimutuel wagering, the daily double will be offered on each day's first and third races. Wagering will be in charge of Jimmy Considine, of Baltimore, one of the "key men" at all tracks, where wagering is in charge of Mortimer M. Mahony. The latter, due to business pressure, was unable to be here this session.

"Yeh, I know she's a sorority gal, but will she neck?"

At the Post . . .

Narragansett Park, Aug. 30.

Dear Al:

I'm Marlboro bound tonight and I'll have to leave Bob Massey, the Suffolk Handicap champion, to do the rooting for tomorrow's selections. I'm going down to try to make the half-milers behave themselves. Down with Eddie Brennan and Joe Boyle in good old southern Maryland where the price of a big hunk of chicken used to be a half-dollar and now it's two bits. I'm going down where there's good earth under your feet in the betting ring and the horses are so close that you feel as though you are running in the races. With the aid of Clocker Mike, who has been holding the fort at Cumberland, I hope we can keep the Benningites smiling. I'm forced to apologize to the customers. Twice in the last two weeks, I have mentioned my best bet as winning when it did not win. I drew five complaints the first time and 18 the second. I'm going to say that it was my fault in both instances and that I will try to be more careful in the future. If you know anything else, say nothing. I will see you at Marlboro.

BILL.

First race—Lady Sara is a standout in this company. She is a sharp filly and needs only a good ride. Tinder Box turned in a good effort last out and is a contender. Twit has a chance to surprise.

Second race—Guilder will like the track if it remains off and will go to the post with a lot of money aboard. Midnight Flyer is good now and is the one to beat. Zulu Lad is better than rated.

Third race—Durwrack seems well placed in this field. Prefers an off track but I'll string along regardless of conditions. Woof is improving. Misapprehension must be respected.

Fourth race—Hokuao gets up with steadying weight and will have Lynch to do the riding. I see no reason for mistakes. Buster Boy is dangerous and can be depended on for a good race. Beaver Lake is in with feather weight.

Fifth race—Fraidy Cat showed excellent form here yesterday and I'm going to try to make this one score in this company. Dancing Doll has been groomed for a win. Red Wagon scored yesterday and should go well if sent back.

Sixth race—Rock Point appears to have found the right spot in this event. Likes the route and I'm relying on Haines for a good ride. Tutticurio runs few bad races. Crete for the show end.

Seventh race—Miss Vince and Sand Baby promise to battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are fit and ready. Marpal, third last out, could surprise.

Bokar Defeats Iona to Take A. & P. Title

Sedinberg Fans 16 Condor Batters as Rajahs Triumph, 11 to 1.

For the second straight year, Bokar's ball tossers won the Atlantic & Pacific League championship yesterday and qualified for The Post Association Sunday play-offs. Celebrating his recovery from a broken arm which had kept him idle most of the season, Pitcher Orrell came out to hold Iona to five hits and twirl the champs to a 7-5 win.

Another pitcher, Sedinberg, of the Rajahs, shared league honors for the day with Orrell, fanning 16 Condor batters in seven innings in hurling his team to an 11-1 triumph. While his club was pounding out 16 hits, Sedinberg was holding the Birdmen to 3 hits, all singles.

The Bokars rode to the championship on a 12-hit attack off Armentrout, Iona pitching ace, with Lund and Hilgenberg each getting three hits, including two singles and a homer by Lund. The games marked the season's close for the A. & P. League.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Perhaps folks were a bit hasty in acclaiming young Bob Feller as the reincarnation of Walter Johnson's pitching speed. Yesterday up at Boston, the Red Sox made great haste in knocking young Feller out of the ball game. The Cleveland Indians found it expedient to use a pinch-hitter for him after the fifth inning, by which time the Red Sox had four runs to show for their efforts against the 17-year old lad.

POVICH.

But the boy who had struck out 15 St. Louis Browns the day before apparently does have something more on the ball than the stitches. You'll notice that he struck out five Red Sox in those five innings he did pitch yesterday and that is a better than tolerable average. Three bases on balls and a wild pitch appear to have been Feller's chief sins against the Sox.

Manager Steve O'Neill, of the Indians, who should know whereof he speaks when he speaks of pitchers, seein' as how he caught big league pitching for nigh on to 20 years, is one of Feller's greatest admirers and a firm believer that the youth is destined for pitching greatness.

"He's the fastest thing in the American League right now," quoth O'Neill, "and he isn't even matured, yet. When he made his first start against the Browns and struck out 15 of 'em, he was depending on sheer speed, and he's two years younger than Walter Johnson was when Barney broke into the big leagues. Feller's going to fill out; he's going to have a better delivery; he's going to learn the hitters and he's going to be a whale of a pitcher, if he isn't one right now."

Feller's entrance into the league, promising as it does a fine type of fast-ball pitching, is a refreshing note in a circuit which has come up with a surprising number of so-called nothing-ball pitchers who have been getting by on sheer control and reducing the traditional thud of the bat against horsehide to a dull thud.

The nothing-ball group is captained by Wes Ferrell, of the Red Sox, who has won 17 games this season despite the fact that his fast ball wouldn't, in baseball parlance, crash a window pane. Like Ferrell, who turned to slow curves when the sap left his pitching arm, is Ivy Paul Andrews, of the Browns, who was throwing a mush-ball up to the plate against the Nats yesterday, and almost got away with it.

Control, of course, is the chief asset of the nothing-ball pitcher, but he operates in the knowledge that the batter must provide all the power of a base hit. In contrast to the fast ball or fast curve that rockets off a bat, the slow ball is pounded into the ground or drifts lazily overhead. Few are the extra-base hits off nothing-ball pitching.

The slow ball, or nothing-ball, is not to be confused with the knuckler as practiced by such as Lloyd Brown, of the Indians, and which is in itself an art. The nothing-ball pitcher, unlike the heaver of the knuckler, usually boasts no change of pace. He has no fast ball with which to mix up his delivery, and the hitter is in for a steady diet of mush-ball pitching to his great disgust.

When batters declare that a pitcher does not have enough stuff to hit they actually mean it. They mean that the ball is coming up to the plate so slow that it is impossible to rap it sharply past the infielders or on a line into the outfield. They don't like nothing-ball pitching, which, perhaps, makes smart guys out of nothing-ball pitchers.

Washington fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday saw put into practice a theory that major league managers have always held . . . Manager Rogers Hornsby, of the Browns, you notice, pitched the slow-balling Andrews in the first game and the fast-balling Jachuchi in the second game . . . and Bucky Harris followed the same plan with the comparatively slow-balling Joe Carcarella and the fire-balling Newsom . . . on the theory that in the second game of double-headers the teams are just a bit tired and after looking at slow-ball hurling, fast-ball pitching looks even faster to 'em . . . at a time when their fine physical edge is worn . . . his .390 batting average and extra-base hits in the Southern Association have earned Freddie Singston the soubriquet of Singing Wood Singston . . . the Nats turned down an offer of $40,000 for Singston in order to give him one more big league tryout.

Final of Polo Tourney Is Postponed by Rain

Cleveland, Aug. 30 (A).—The final match of the national 12-goal polo tournament, scheduled for today between Fort Myer, Va., and the Huisache team of Houston, Tex., was postponed until Monday or Tuesday because of wet grounds.

Tournament officials said the match would be played tomorrow if the weather permitted. Members of the Fort Myer team said they would have to leave Cleveland by Tuesday night.

Manhattan Wins B Title; Heurichs Take A Playoff Opener, 9-1

McGee Allows Nolan but 2 Safeties

Brewery teams took all the honors yesterday in championship play-off games of the crack National City League of The Post Sandlot Association. Old Manhattan Beer outclassed the Nolan Motors, 9 to 1, to win the Section B championship and the Heurich Brewers opened their Section A play-off series with the Shady Grove Barbecuers with another 9-to-1 triumph.

A crowd of 5,000 fans througed around South Ellipse diamond to see the Brewers awaken in the sixth inning after trailing, 1 to 0, and pound out nine runs in the three ensuing innings. In each frame, it was the tributed the bulk of the damage. This trio collected 8 of the Brewers' 14 hits.

Things were going along in great shape for the Barbecuers until the fateful sixth. Fat Frank Baroni, roly-poly Shady Grove pitcher, had allowed only two hits until Knight, who connected for three singles and a triple, opened the sixth with a single to mark the beginning of the Heurich onslaught.

James Effective.

Shady Grove, first-half champions, had taken its 1-to-0 lead in the fourth on three hits off Walter James, half of the total number he allowed. Huck Hilleary opened with a single but was out stealing. Shortstop Scott followed with a single and advanced on Harding's successful bunt. Waverly Wheeler, Maryland's three-sport star, then came across with a single which narrowly missed beaning James, and sent Hilleary across the plate.

Baroni was unable to protect his scant lead, however, for after Knight had opened the sixth with his single, Zahn sacrificed him to second and Bennie singled sharply to left. Huck Stahl grounded out but Tommy Thompson singled and Bennie scored when Mahaney juggled Shelton's roller.

It was Knight, Zahn and Bennie who joined forces in the next round, all three hitting successively to account for two more runs. Baroni finally gave way in the eighth when Knight and Zahn tripled to center after three runs had already crossed the plate. Blackie Adair held the Brewers scoreless after the fifth run had been registered.

In the meantime, the Barbecuers were more or less helpless before the James twirling and the sparkling, errorless support of his teammates.

Old Manhattan swept to its title in true championship fashion with Bob McGee holding the Motor Co. to two hits, both singles. Hal Kiesel, of Nolan Motors, was touched for ten hits by the Beermen. McGee missed his shutout when the Motor Co. came through with a run in the sixth.

It was Old Manhattan's second straight win in the two-out-of-three game series. Nolan won the first game, 15 to 4, but Old Manhattan evened the series last Sunday with a 15-to-5 win.

The Section A series will be resumed a week from Sunday, with no game being scheduled for this coming Sabbath.

The tense fight for the junior championship in the National City League continued grimly yesterday with Simpson's Pharmacy nosing out the West End aundry, 6 to 5, to keep a scant half-game behind the league-leading eorge's Radio nine.

The two jeams will meet Sunday on the Ellipse in the game which will decide the second-half title. A victory for George's will clinch the honors and qualify it for the league play-off series with J. C. Flood Co., first-half champions. Flood kept in a tie for third place by taking a 4-2 decision from Police Boys Club, No. 5.

Simpson's had the able pitching of Lefty Arnold Heft to thank yesterday for its highly important triumph. Relieving Kilmer Bortz, Woodrow Wilson High ace, in the sixth inning, Heft set the Laundry boys back with no hits to the finish.

West End had a 5-1 lead going into the seventh, but Simpson's forced over three runs in that frame and two more in the eighth otwin the ball game. Lefty Rowles, Heft's teammate on Central High, collected two of the Simpson hits. The winners are composed almost completely of high school players, namely, Rowles, Heft, Don Fones and Ed McDonough, of Central; Francis Coakley and eorge Coakley, of Roosevelt; Roland, of Tech; Bortz, of Wilson, and Bob Rafterry and Paul Borden, of Western.

George's beat the Simpson stars in their first meeting in the second-half series.

Junior, Senior Doubles Play Set Today

Play in the playground boys' junior and senior tennis doubles championships will open at 10 a. m. today at Rosedale and Chevy Chase Playgrounds, with some 140 players, winners in the individual playground tournaments, competing. When the quarter-final round is reached, all matches will be transferred to Chevy Chase.

Melvin Dower and Delwin Blue, of Takoma Park, were the senior division winners last year, while Doyle Royal and Harry Landsman, of Park View, won in the junior class.

Among the favored teams entered in the senior division are Harry March, of Burroughs' playground senior singles champ, and Leonard Sokol, District junior titlist; Gene Owens and Dick Wilmer, of Mitchell Park; Delwin Blue and Jack Carr, of Takoma Park, and Bernard Blanken and Doyle Royal, of Park View.

Most of the junior players are newcomers to playground tourneys but the junior singles champion, Mike Nunez, of Montrose, and his partner, Ken Dalby, should finish near the top of the list.

Today's Schedule.
(Senior Division.)

The following matches will be played at 10 o'clock, at Rosedale: Stasuli and Lombardy (Rosedale) vs. Sherwood entry; Rhodes and Marcopolous (Garfield) vs. Virginia Avenue entry; Schwanner and Walters (Hoover) vs. Potomac Avenue entry.

The following matches will be played at Chevy Chase, at 10 o'clock: Baer and Baer (Chevy Chase) vs. Johnson and Murray (Hamilton); Royal and Blanken (Park View) vs. Thomson entry; Morgan and Hitchcock (McMillan) vs. Raymond entry; Falconer and Wells (Montrose) vs. Phillips entry; Feldenburg and Locklay (Twin Oaks) vs. Owens and Wilmer (Mitchell Park).

(Junior Division.)

The following matches will be played at 10 o'clock, at Chevy Chase: Gunenshimer and Weise (Hamilton) vs. Parker and Jones (Potomac Avenue); Smith and Panago (Happy Hollow) vs. Kendall and Blank (McMillan); Henderson and Kramer (Mitchell Park) vs. Thomson entry; Sawtell and Hoffman (Georgetown) vs. Raymond entry; Ehrlick and Rushen (Park View) vs. Phillips entry; Nuenz and Dalby (Montrose) vs. Reno entry.

The following matches will be played at 10 o'clock at Rosedale: Hartford and O'Brien (Garfield) vs. Potomac entry; Trammell and Knott (Hoover) vs. Virginia Avenue entry; Boyd and Cooksey (Rosedale) vs. Sherwood entry.

Peacock Faces Fight To Keep Amateur Title

By Dave Herman.

A red hot battle for the District amateur golf championship owned by Congressional's Roger Peacock is due to take place at Manor Club's course Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

With the largest field in years expected to answer the starter's call for the 18-hole qualifying round, young Mr. Peacock will discover that all will not be so easy along the bunkered front when the 16 low scorers open fire in match play.

On the strength of the turnout for the National qualifying trials in which a record total of 56 Washingtonians competed, at least 65 golfers will attempt to lift the crown from Peacock.

What a far cry the 1936 starting field will be from the field of 1933 when less than 20 were on hand at Indian Spring for the championship which was then conducted on a 72-hole basis.

Eight of the participants at Manor already have qualified for the National Amateur at Garden City, L. I., September 14-19, and thus the District championship will be in the nature of a tune-up for the big show.

A sturdy challenger will be 17-year-old Bobby Brownell, a member of Manor, who finished one shot behind Peacock in the Columbia trials. Others ready to wage a determined scrap for the title are Gene Pittman and Levi Yoder, of Kenwood; Tommy Webb, of Washington; Forrest Thompson, of Beaver Dam; Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring, all of whom qualified for the Amateur.

Harry Pitt, former District champion, will be playing on his home course, where he is tough to beat.

Entries will close Wednesday night. They should be sent to Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary, at the Manor Club.

Midget Crown Won by Takoma Boys Club

Nationwide Grocers Bow, 6 to 4, in Deciding of Play-Off Series.

The Takoma Boys Club yesterday won the midget championship of the National City League of The Post Sandlot Association, by defeating the Nationwide Grocers, 6 to 4, on the East Ellipse. It was the second game of a two-out-of-three-game play-off series for the league title. Takoma won the first game.

Nationwide, first-half champs, got off to a 3-2 lead over the second-half winners but the lead continued to see-saw until the fifth when Takoma came through with two runs to take a 6-4 lead. There was no further scoring.

The five-hit pitching of 14-year-old Buddy Webb was the big factor in the Takoma victory. Day, with two doubles, led the Takoma nine-hit attack.

Steel Demand Holds Industry At Year's Peak

Output Rises to 73 Per Cent Despite Drop in Auto Orders.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Steelworks operations last week advanced 1 point to 73 per cent of capacity, a new six-year high, under heavy miscellaneous demand, and with new specifications in some lines showing slight increases, says Steel. This rate was maintained despite a decline of 19,772 units in automobile production.

Although scrap prices continued upward there was a more settled tone in the markets of several districts. Steel's index of scrap prices made a 28-cent increase to $15.41, highest level since the middle of October, 1929. In some quarters it is believed further price advances are likely.

Demand for pig iron has been strong and a nonintegrated Pittsburgh steel producer recently negotiated the purchase of 25,000 tons of basic material to be shipped via all-water route over the next four or five months. There is some discussion of the possibility of advancing pig iron prices about September 1.

Plate Mills Behind.

Backlogs of some producers have not been reduced materially. Tin plate mills are still six to eight weeks behind on deliveries. Heavy demand for material to be fabricated into general line cans has been a steadying factor. Packers' can requirements have been enlivened by a record salmon and fruit pack on the West Coast.

A number of sheet producers also have had difficulty cutting down their backlogs, especially those in the Pittsburgh district, where delivery promises on cold-reduced sheets range from six to eight weeks. Specifications for electrical sheets have been driven in by the recent announcement of a $2 price advance.

Total output of automobiles was 53,937 units, compared with 73,709 in the preceding week.

The awarding of contracts for ten destroyers and five submarines will result in the purchase of a large amount of steel. For the destroyers about 450 tons of plates each will be reqquired, while the submarines will take between 200 and 250 tons each. A large number of orders for barges in lots of one and two apiece is expected to develop in the fall.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Street Gains Courage as Business Rises in Slack Season and War Fears Fade.

New York, Aug. 30.—Financial markets last week uncovered considerable indecision among speculators, based on fear of a decline from the long rise that might come about suddenly as a result of (1) outbreak of fighting in Europe, (2) a slump in business this autumn because of belated drought effects, and (3) a purely internal attack on prices by bears who might suppose that the small volume of trading and the high prices reached by stocks made the market vulnerable.

The fore part of the week saw ups and downs in stock prices, but at the close a sharp rally restored early losses, with something to spare. Moreover, the recovery was the most pronounced in pivotal portions of the market, calculated to give the most reassurance on business; namely, the steel, motor and railroad sections. The net result of the week's trading in stocks was the recording of new high prices for a great many issues in the steel and miscellaneous sections, and with a moderate rise in trading activity.

The week also brought another wave of extra dividend payments, which, if they did not stir the imagination with regard to future distributions, at least emphasized the fact that corporation earnings in the first half of the year have been remarkably good for a great many companies. It is well known that the new profits tax law, bad as it is held to be, is responsible for the extra dividends in large part; but it also is recognized that the money would not be paid out if it were not being earned, and earnings dictate stock market prices.

Tax Implications.

On the subject of the tax, Gov. Landon made it plain that he considered it a bad measure and, if elected, would move for its prompt repeal. That and other portions of his address probably helped to revive bullish sentiment in Wall Street. Other factors included a hardening of opinion that a general war in Europe was unlikely at present, an absence for the moment of disturbing labor troubles, and attempt by the Administration to give further reassurance on its statement that no further tax increases are likely at the coming session of Congress, and signs that the mild setback in business from the high level reached in July was ending.

Few believe that, if the Government intends to move away from the danger zone and actually try to balance the budget, new and higher taxes can be avoided. Under the circumstances, those inclined to take at face value the promises of the Administration on that score argue, to be logical, that what the Government means is that it will cut down on its spending. If it reduces waste and insane spending even in moderate measure the present tax rates on the considerable rise in business and individual incomes would turn the trick of a balanced budget.

Expanding Business.

Business indices published during the week were mostly favorable to the markets, as indicating either an expansion in business against downward seasonal trends or indications of recovery from recession of earlier in the month. The Federal Reserve Board's seasonally adjusted index of industrial activity for July rose sharply, and the board reported maintenance of a high level in the first three weeks of August. The Department of Commerce reported a gain in factory employment and pay rolls for last month, and predicted an early revival in the motor industry, temporarily depressed by preparation of new models.

Whatever happens to markets over the next few weeks, it looks fairly certain that the autumn will bring some highly favorable earnings reports for the third quarter, and it also will see the final wave of dividend extras in an attempt to avoid the penalty taxes on profits. On the financial side also the indications are that business will expand over the next few months. This week brought news of the first large borrowing of new capital by a corporation in heavy industry—Bethlehem Steel—and meanwhile commercial loans at the banks continue to rise.

Security Offerings $57,239,000 in Week

New security offerings in this market during the week totaled $57,239,000, compared with $135,627,000 last week, $59,570,000 in the corresponding week of last year $9,600,000 in 1934, $2,000,000, in 1933 and $9,242,000 in 1932. For the year to date the total is $3,574,417,100, compared with $2,235,448,500 in the like period of last year, $984,509,600 in 1934, $396,459,000 in 1933, $949,656,000 in 1932 and $2,913,506,000 in 1931.

Crushing Taxes Seen in Wake Of Rising Debt

Only Change in Fiscal Policy Will Avert Evil, Bank Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—The Guaranty Trust Co., in its monthly survey, said today that the Nation's employment conditions would be improved "if the State of the public finances were such as to inspire more confidence on the part of those who supply capital and those who employ labor."

The review referred to the well-sustained volume of retail business, increased activity in the construction industry and expansion of life insurance sales as among the most favorable signs of revival. Concerning Government finances, it said:

"If the millions of persons with moderate incomes are to escape the evils of crushing taxation on the one hand and the even greater evils of monetary disorder on the other, the escape must come through an abrupt change in fiscal policies in response to an informed and aroused public opinion.

"The complacency with which governmental deficits and mounting public debts in recent years have been viewed by the majority of our citizens bears eloquent testimony to the lack of understanding on the part of the average man regarding the extent to which these developments affect his own present and future welfare.

"The concern of the average citizen in the public budget lies in the fact that every unbalanced budget increases debt and that every increase in debt raises the cost of government," the latter declared.

Broderick to Discuss Education in Banking

Gov. Joseph A. Broderick of the Federal Reserve Board, has announced "Adult Education in Banking" as the topic of the radio address which he will deliver Wednesday, September 9, at 10:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time), on the occasion of the annual radio commencement exercises of the American Institute of Banking.

These exercises will be held simultaneously in 220 chapters throughout the United States and their local programs are being arranged to tune in for the address which will be broadcast through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Co., using their station out of Washington and the blue network over the country.

On the Air Today

Details of the new soups, entrees and desserts being prepared for the Nation's radio bill-of-fare for the 1936-1937 season continue to arrive as rapidly as mimeograph machines in the industry's program departments can turn them out.

Here is the latest list from which you may wish to make a few mental notes relative to favorites who have been missing these summer months—or the inaugural dates of a new show or two that gives promise:

Ted Malone—Whose readings already are known to Columbia listeners ,a new series beginning October 5 (Mondays) at 12:15 p. m.

Football—A new "Football Revue" with Ed Thorgersen, sports commentator, and Kay Kyser's orchestra, for Columbia, starting October 3 (Saturdays). Will present football coaches and high spots of the day's games. (Eddie Dooley inaugurates a bi-weekly forecast series for Columbia, September 17, but WJSV is not in the network. Philadelphia and New York stations are included.)

Carborundum Band—The oldest program of band music in radio, returns Saturday nights at 7:30, October 17, under the title of "Voice of Niagara." A Columbia feature.

Floyd Gibbons—Cashes in on his latest war observations, in Spain, to headline a series for Columbia beginning October 3, with the help of Vincent Lopez and orchestra and guest stars.

Guy Lombardo—New series begins next Sunday afternoon for Columbia, filling the weekly period held by Crumit and Sanderson last winter.

"Portraits of Harmony"—This is the new seris featuring outstanding dance bands, a different orchestra each week. Signed so far are Lopez, Duchin, Kemp, Busse and Phil Harris. Tuesdays, at 9:30, for N. B. C., starting September 15.

"Young Hickory"—Experiences and difficulties encountered by a young doctor as he attempts to get a start in his profession dramatized in aerial form, daily except Saturday and Sunday, beginning September 7, for N. B. C.

Featured today:

Vox Poppers—Belcher and Johnson interview America's "safest drivers," from safe-driving convention in New York, WRC, at 1.

"Sweet Swing"—Horace Heidt and orchestra demonstrate application of new style of "swing" through use of reed section, WJSV, at 7.

"Gambling Man"—Detective drama for this week, Monday through Friday, concerns the rise of an East Side boy in New York, WOL, at 7:45.

"Cheating Cheaters"—With George Raft and June Lang in "Radio Theater," WJSV, at 8. Cecil B. DeMille will interview Gloria Swanson between acts.

It hasn't been so long ago that whisperings were heard in some of radio's many circles within circles as to the ultimate outcome of the decision that must be made about communism. First a policy would have to be established by radio broadcasters: Should Communist speakers and other political extremes be permitted to broadcast. And if so, what to do in case the public objected strenuously. Well the matter didn't perturb the inner sanctums particularly and one after another the various hurdles have been taken with ease. When Earl Browder spoke over an N. B. C. net last week he opened an eight-week-series for his party. After all, radio is the great American soap-box—and most listeners, methinks, are more apt to wax vituperative over radio's chronic pain-in-the-neck, the long advertisement, than over the political beliefs of Mr. Browder.

Nelson Eddy has announced there will be a "No Visitors Allowed" sign hanging on the door to his studio when his new series begins in the Hollywood studios of Columbia September 27. Reason: "When I get up before the microphone, I like to shed my coat and tie, unbutton my collar—and sing!"

LIMITED PARTNERSHIP NO. 94.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Otis A. Glazebrook, jr., P. Erskine Wood, Edward O. McDonnell, John G. Pennypacker, James D. Sawyer, Charles S. Sargent, William P. T. Preston, J. S. Wilson, jr., Charles H. Baetjer, Don M. Kelley, Gerald C. Maxwell, Frederick Osborn and Alfonso P. Villa, having formed a limited partnership pursuant to the laws of the State of New York, and desiring to do business in the District of Columbia as a limited partnership, have this day filed a certificate of limited partnership in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; that the firm name of said partnership is G. M.-P. Murphy & Company; that the business intended to be transacted by said partnership is buying or otherwise acquiring, selling or otherwise disposing of, and in any manner dealing, whether on behalf of the copartnership or for others, in stocks, bonds or other securities and property, transacting a general securities and brokerage business such as is ordinarily conducted by New York Stock Exchange firms, conforming to the constitution and rules of the said New York Stock Exchange, and underwriting or subscribing for or assisting to procure underwritings or subscriptions for stocks, bonds or other securities and/or otherwise financing or assisting to procure the financing of corporate or other enterprises; that the said Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Otis A. Glazebrook, jr., P. Erskine Wood, Edward O. McDonnell, John G. Pennypacker, James D. Sawyer, Charles S. Sargent, William P. T. Preston, J. S. Wilson, jr., Charles H. Baetjer, Don M. Kelley and Gerald C. Maxwell are general partners; that the said Frederick Osborn and Alfonso P. Villa are special partners; that the said special partners have contributed as capital to the common stock of said partnership, the following amounts in cash, namely: Frederick Osborn, $87,500.00, and Alfonso P. Villa, $357,500.00, and have also made additional contributions of capital to said common stock consisting in each case of cash, securities and/or other property having actual and agreed values hereinafter specified, to wit: Frederick Osborn, $62,500.00, and Alfonso P. Villa, $42,500.00; and that the term for which the said partnership is to exist commenced on July 1, 1936, and is to end at the close of business on June 30, 1939, subject to earlier termination at the option of any partner in the event of a material breach of the articles of copartnership. Dated this 12th day of August, 1936. (Signed) GRAYSON M.-P. MURPHY, OTIS A. GLAZEBROOK, JR., P. ERSKINE WOOD, EDWARD O. McDONNELL, JOHN G. PENNYPACKER, JAMES D. SAWYER, CHARLES S. SARGENT, WILLIAM P. T. PRESTON, J. S. WILSON, JR., CHARLES H. BAETJER, DON M. KELLEY, GERALD C. MAXWELL, FREDERICK OSBORN and ALFONSO P. VILLA.

Steel Demand Holds Industry At Year's Peak

Output Rises to 73 Per Cent Despite Drop in Auto Orders.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Steelworks operations last week advanced 1 point to 73 per cent of capacity, a new six-year high, under heavy miscellaneous demand, and with new specifications in some lines showing slight increases, says Steel. This rate was maintained despite a decline of 19,772 units in automobile production.

Operations increased in four districts, including Pittsburgh and Youngstown, while all of the other steel centers held at the rates prevailing during the previous week.

Although scrap prices continued upward there was a more settled tone in the markets of several districts. Steel's index of scrap prices made a 28-cent increase to $15.41, highest level since the middle of October, 1929. In some quarters it is believed further price advances are likely.

Demand for pig iron has been strong and a nonintegrated Pittsburgh steel producer recently negotiated the purchase of 25,000 tons of basic material to be shipped via all-water route over the next four or five months. There is some discussion of the possibility of advancing pig iron prices about September 1.

Plate Mills Behind.

Backlogs of some producers have not been reduced materially. Tin plate mills are still six to eight weeks behind on deliveries. Heavy demand for material to be fabricated into general line cans has been a steadying factor. Packers' can requirements have been enlivened by a record salmon and fruit pack on the West Coast.

A number of sheet producers also have had difficulty cutting down their backlogs, especially those in the Pittsburgh district, where delivery promises on cold-reduced sheets range from six to eight weeks. Specifications for electrical sheets have been driven in by the recent announcement of a $2 price advance.

Total output of automobiles was 53,937 units, compared with 73,709 in the preceding week.

The awarding of contracts for ten destroyers and five submarines will result in the purchase of a large amount of steel. For the destroyers about 450 tons of plates each will be reqquired, while the submarines will take between 200 and 250 tons each. A large number of orders for barges in lots of one and two apiece is expected to develop in the fall.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Street Gains Courage as Business Rises in Slack Season and War Fears Fade.

New York, Aug. 30.—Financial markets last week uncovered considerable indecision among speculators, based on fear of a decline from the long rise that might come about suddenly as a result of (1) outbreak of fighting in Europe, (2) a slump in business this autumn because of belated drought effects, and (3) a purely internal attack on prices by bears who might suppose that the small volume of trading and the high prices reached by stocks made the market vulnerable.

The fore part of the week saw ups and downs in stock prices, but at the close a sharp rally restored early losses, with something to spare. Moreover, the recovery was the most pronounced in pivotal portions of the market, calculated to give the most reassurance on business; namely, the steel, motor and railroad sections. The net result of the week's trading in stocks was the recording of new high prices for a great many issues in the steel and miscellaneous sections, and with a moderate rise in trading activity.

The week also brought another wave of extra dividend payments, which, if they did not stir the imagination with regard to future distributions, at least emphasized the fact that corporation earnings in the first half of the year have been remarkably good for a great many companies. It is well known that the new profits tax law, bad as it is held to be, is responsible for the extra dividends in large part; but it also is recognized that the money would not be paid out if it were not being earned, and earnings dictate stock market prices.

Tax Implications.

On the subject of the tax, Gov. Landon made it plain that he considered it a bad measure and, if elected, would move for its prompt repeal. That and other portions of his address probably helped to revive bullish sentiment in Wall Street. Other factors included a hardening of opinion that a general war in Europe was unlikely at present, an absence for the moment of disturbing labor troubles, and attempt by the Administration to give further reassurance on its statement that no further tax increases are likely at the coming session of Congress, and signs that the mild setback in business from the high level reached in July was ending.

Few believe that, if the Government intends to move away from the danger zone and actually try to balance the budget, new and higher taxes can be avoided. Under the circumstances, those inclined to take at face value the promises of the Administration on that score argue, to be logical, that what the Government means is that it will cut down on its spending. If it reduces waste and insane spending even in moderate measure the present tax rates on the considerable rise in business and individual incomes would turn the trick of a balanced budget.

Expanding Business.

Business indices published during the week were mostly favorable to the markets, as indicating either an expansion in business against downward seasonal trends or indications of recovery from recession of earlier in the month. The Federal Reserve Board's seasonally adjusted index of industrial activity for July rose sharply, and the board reported maintenance of a high level in the first three weeks of August. The Department of Commerce reported a gain in factory employment and pay rolls for last month, and predicted an early revival in the motor industry, temporarily depressed by preparation of new models.

Whatever happens to markets over the next few weeks, it looks fairly certain that the autumn will bring some highly favorable earnings reports for the third quarter, and it also will see the final wave of dividend extras in an attempt to avoid the penalty taxes on profits. On the financial side also the indications are that business will expand over the next few months. This week brought news of the first large borrowing of new capital by a corporation in heavy industry—Bethlehem Steel—and meanwhile commercial loans at the banks continue to rise.

Security Offerings $57,239,000 in Week

New security offerings in this market during the week totaled $57,239,000, compared with $135,627,000 last week, $59,570,000 in the corresponding week of last year $9,600,000 in 1934, $2,000,000, in 1933 and $9,242,000 in 1932. For the year to date the total is $3,574,417,100, compared with $2,235,448,500 in the like period of last year, $984,509,600 in 1934, $396,459,000 in 1933, $949,656,000 in 1932 and $2,913,508,000 in 1931.

Crushing Taxes Seen in Wake Of Rising Debt

Only Change in Fiscal Policy Will Avert Evil, Bank Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 30.—The Guaranty Trust Co., in its monthly survey, said today that the Nation's employment conditions would be improved "if the State of the public finances were such as to inspire more confidence on the part of those who supply capital and those who employ labor."

The review referred to the well-sustained volume of retail business, increased activity in the construction industry and expansion of life insurance sales as among the most favorable signs of revival. Concerning Government finances, it said:

"If the millions of persons with moderate incomes are to escape the evils of crushing taxation on the one hand and the even greater evils of monetary disorder on the other, the escape must come through an abrupt change in fiscal policies in response to an informed and aroused public opinion.

"The complacency with which governmental deficits and mounting public debts in recent years have been viewed by the majority of our citizens bears eloquent testimony to the lack of understanding on the part of the average man regarding the extent to which these developments affect his own present and future welfare.

"The concern of the average citizen in the public budget lies in the fact that every unbalanced budget increases debt and that every increase in debt raises the cost of government," the latter declared.

Broderick to Discuss Education in Banking

Gov. Joseph A. Broderick of the Federal Reserve Board, has announced "Adult Education in Banking" as the topic of the radio address which he will deliver Wednesday, September 9, at 10:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time), on the occasion of the annual radio commencement exercises of the American Institute of Banking.

These exercises will be held simultaneously in 220 chapters throughout the United States and their local programs are being arranged to tune in for the address which will be broadcast through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Co., using their station out of Washington and the blue network over the country.

On the Air Today

Details of the new soups, entrees and desserts being prepared for the Nation's radio bill-of-fare for the 1936-1937 season continue to arrive as rapidly as mimeograph machines in the industry's program departments can turn them out.

Here is the latest list from which you may wish to make a few mental notes relative to favorites who have been missing these summer months—or the inaugural dates of a new show or two that gives promise:

Ted Malone—Whose readings already are known to Columbia listeners ,a new series beginning October 5 (Mondays) at 12:15 p. m.

Football—A new "Football Revue" with Ed Thorgersen, sports commentator, and Kay Kyser's orchestra, for Columbia, starting October 3 (Saturdays). Will present football coaches and high spots of the day's games. (Eddie Dooley inaugurates a bi-weekly forecast series for Columbia, September 17, but WJSV is not in the network. Philadelphia and New York stations are included.)

Carborundum Band—The oldest program of band music in radio, returns Saturday nights at 7:30, October 17, under the title of "Voice of Niagara." A Columbia feature.

Floyd Gibbons—Cashes in on his latest war observations, in Spain, to headline a series for Columbia beginning October 3, with the help of Vincent Lopez and orchestra and guest stars.

Guy Lombardo—New series begins next Sunday afternoon for Columbia, filling the weekly period held by Crumit and Sanderson last winter.

"Portraits of Harmony"—This is the new seris featuring outstanding dance bands, a different orchestra each week. Signed so far are Lopez, Duchin, Kemp, Busse and Phil Harris. Tuesdays, at 9:30, for N. B. C., starting September 15.

"Young Hickory"—Experiences and difficulties encountered by a young doctor as he attempts to get a start in his profession dramatized in aerial form, daily except Saturday and Sunday, beginning September 7, for N. B. C.

* * * *

Featured today:

Vox Poppers—Belcher and Johnson interview America's "safest drivers," from safe-driving convention in New York, WRC, at 1.

"Sweet Swing"—Horace Heidt and orchestra demonstrate application of new style of "swing" through use of reed section, WJSV, at 7.

It hasn't been so long ago that whisperings were heard in some of radio's many circles within circles as to the ultimate outcome of the decision that must be made about communism. First a policy would have to be established by radio broadcasters: Should Communist speakers and other political extremes be permitted to broadcast. And if so, what to do in case the public objected strenuously. Well the matter didn't perturb the inner sanctums particularly and one after another the various hurdles have been taken with ease. When Earl Browder spoke over an N. B. C. net last week he opened an eight-week-series for his party. After all, radio is the great American soap-box—and most listeners, methinks, are more apt to wax vituperative over radio's chronic pain-in-the-neck, the long advertisement, than over the political beliefs of Mr. Browder.

Nelson Eddy has announced there will be a "No Visitors Allowed" sign hanging on the door to his studio when his new series begins in the Hollywood studios of Columbia September 27. Reason: "When I get up before the microphone, I like to shed my coat and tie, unbutton my collar—and sing!"

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics

By Bob Zuppke
Famous Football Coach.

SO BUD SHEKELS WOULDN'T COME WITH YOU THIS AFTERNOON, EH?
8-31
HE SAID HE WAS A STUDENT HERE, NOT A PRISONER, AND HE WOULD STAY WHERE HE PLEASED
HELL PROBABLY TELEGRAPH HIS MILLIONAIRE FATHER
IF HE DOES, HELL FIND OUT HIS DAD SAID I'M TO TAKE CHARGE OF HIM
GUESS THIS IS THE PLACE- IT'S THE BEST IN TOWN
THIS OUGHT TO BE GOOD!

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

MERCY, IT'S A LONG HOT WALK FROM OUR ROOMS TO HERE. THESE SPICED APPLES ARE RUNNING OUT OF THE PAN.
GEE, THAT'S TOUGH LUCK, GRAN'MA.
YOU OUGHT TO HAVE A PLACE RIGHT IN THE STORE, WHERE YOU COULD MAKE 'EM. WHY NOT TURN THE ROOM AT THE BACK INTO A KITCHEN?
8-31
THAT SOUNDS LIKE A GOOD IDEA, DENNIE, IF DAD FLICK WILL LET US USE THE ROOM. AND WE COULD BUY SOME KIND OF A STOVE.
YESSIR, DENNIE, THE WAY THESE APPLES ARE SELLING, WE MAY SOON NEED A FACTORY TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND. THAT IS, IF WE CAN ONLY KEEP THE RECIPE A SECRET.

A. F. G. E. Outlook.

We've been circulating about trying to learn what the likely effects of last Friday's vote at the District department meeting will be and the net result of our wanderings has been to make the convention outlook seem more unsettled than before.

In blocking the efforts of the conservatives to oust them, the left wingers mustered the greatest show of strength they have ever manifested at a department meeting. The fact that from 10 to 12 normally conservative lodges either split their votes or cast their lot with the so-called New Deal bloc has given conservative leaders something to think about.

Conservatives went into the department meeting thinking that the delegates and alternates could be separated into sheep and goats. Several of the conservative leaders still believe, for that matter, that if the delegates had been told that the A. F. G. E. isn't big enough for both radicals and conservatives and that the left wingers must go, the necessary two-thirds majority would have been obtained. Still it was thought wiser not to press the issue until after the convention.

The substitute amendment on which the test vote was taken was introduced by Walter L. Disbrow, of Navy Yard Lodge No. 93, normally one of the conservative lodges. Whether Disbrow would have gone along with the conservatives in a showdown is problematical, but the fact that he did manage to swing over enough normally conservative votes to save the leftists indictes that there is a small bloc of lodges in the District which is not yet ready to go to the extreme of ousting the "New Deal" group.

The problem that confronts conservative leaders now is not so much what to do with the left-wingers as with this group that we like to call "right center" lodges. Conservatives are certain that barring a political miracle they will have a majority at the convention, sufficient to elect Col. Stengle as president, to ratify the suspension of the Justice lodge and to vote confidence in Custer, Dimond, Schaefer and Bain, whose recall is being sought.

But in other issues, particularly any possible Constitutional changes that would permit the executive council to oust the "New Deal" lodges, and the question of the granting of temporary charters, the left-wingers are certain to gain some conservative support. How much of a vote deflection there will be, no one can tell. And the conservative leaders are wondering whether it would be wiser to liberalize their plans slightly or whether they should go into the convention determined to seek an all-or-nothing showdown.

That ultra "red" story that appeared in one of the local newspapers accusing 2,500 Government employes of trying to take over the A. F. G. E. is being distributed, marked and all, from the federation's national headquarters. Possibly it's being done as part of a membership drive.

Tomatoes Versus Oranges.

Tomato growers won't like to hear this, but three Bureau of Home Economics scientists at the Department of Agriculture have discovered that orange juice contains two to three times as much vitamin C as tomato juice.

In case you're one of those persons who don't know one vitamin from another, Mr. C. is the fellow that prevents scurvy if you swallow enough of him. To obtain their results the investigators, Esther P. Daniel, Hazel E. Munsell and Mary H. Kennedy, worked for one year, squeezing, on the average, five oranges a week and almost as many tomatoes.

Some of the tomatoes used came in cans. The investigators discovered that the canned varieties contained as much vitamin C as the fresh ones. If you're in the habit of squeezing orange juice at night to serve at breakfast, you had better stop doing that, for our home economics trio say that there is a 10 per cent loss in vitamin value overnight. If the juice stands for several days as much as 40 per cent of the vitamin content may disappear.

Tickets for the Labor Day weekend excursion to New York City being conducted by the Athletic and Recreational Association of the Department fo Agriculture go on sale tomorrow. They can be obtained from Mrs. Robey Siehr at the information desk in the Administration Building lobby. The tickets will remain on sale until Friday, when the excursion starts.

Retirement Tributes.

Coutrney M. Jenkins, who retires today ater 18 years in the press relations section of the War Department, is to be honored by his coworkers with a floor lamp and smoking stand.

As a former "beat" man at the War and Navy Department, we would like to pay out tribute to his gifts. We know of no more cheery or genial civilian press relations worker in the entire Government service—perhaps some of his geniality was a heritage of the days when he was a traveling salesman. Certainly, his inexhaustible fund of stories was.

What endeared Jenkins to all War Department newspapermen, however, was not the stories—though they helped—but the almost fatherly way in which he looked out after us and saw that we got all the stories there were to be gotten. Dozens of times this reporter was called on the telephone by Jenkins, who had a story that had been run off after we had our beat. One could always be certain that as long as Jenkins was on the job the department was "covered." We wonder what the War Department reporters will do now that he is gone?

The Navy, too, is honoring a distinguished civilian employe who is retiring today. He is Warren S. Yeatman, chief of the photographic section of the hydrograhpic office, who has been with the department for 36 years.

Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, who has written Yeatman a letter of commendation saying:

"Your record of service shows that your technical knowledge and ability, co-operation and loyalty have been recognized through steady promotion up to the high position of chief photographer in the Hydrographic Office.

"Such an excellent record of service is an accomplishment worthy of the highest commendation. The Secretary of the Navy takes great pleasure in complimenting you upon this ocasion and in extending to you his best wishes for many years of health and happiness."

Col. Stengle willk speak at tomorrow night's meeting at the Hotel Hamilton of the AAA Lodge of the A. F. G. E. Several important constitutional problems also are to be discussed.

New Mark Claimed For Queen Mary

London, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—The British super-liner Queen Mary passed Bishops Rock tonight at 8:12 p. m. G. M. T. and Cunard-White Star line officials immediately claimed she had captured the mythical "Blue Riband" symbolic of the North Atlantic speed record.

Cunard officials said the Queen Mary made the 2,929-mile trip in 3 days 23 hours and 57 minutes, averaging 30.63 knots.

The Normandie last September 29 made the trip from Ambrose Light to Plymouth, England, in 3 days 23 hours, but averaged only 30.34 knots over a different route.

The Queen Mary's knot average, therefore, was given as the fastest for any transatlantic water crossing. The Queen Mary last Sunday snatched the westward laurels from the Normandie with a speed of 30.1 knots from Cherbourg to Ambrose with an elapsed time of 4 days 7 hours and 12 minutes. The Normandie's best average time westward is 29.64 knots.

Liquor Profits.

Kilmarnock, Va., Aug. 30.—A. R. Beane, county treasurer of Lancaster County, has received a check for $4,425.57 as Lancaster County's profits of the alcoholic beverage control board for the past year.

Dynamite Blasts Couple to Death

Tiajuana, Mex., Aug. 30 (U.P.).—A man and his wife were blasted to death, and their 5-year-old child was injured critically today in an explosion that shattered a frame hotel and shook other buildings in the business section.

The dead are Jose Madrigal, 28, Mexican highway laborer, and Manuela Madrigal, 25, a waitress. The child, Marie, was blown through a window to land 100 feet away. She is in Tiajuana Hospital. Three other woman in the hotel were injured.

Carlos Reviera, night chief of police, expressed the theory that Madrigal, in a jealous rage, deliberately exploded dynamite he had taken from the Ensenda-Tiajuana highway project on which he was employed. He was said to have quarreled with his wife recently over her alleged attentions to other men.

One Killed as Plane Plunges Into Atlantic

Wilmington, N. C., Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Eugene R. Pickard, jr., 25, of Wilmington, was killed, and Carl N. Dunn, jr., 23, local sportsman, was seriously injured today when their airplane crashed into the Atlantic Ocean off Wrightsville Beach.

Witnesses said the plane was only a few hundred feet above the water and appeared to go into a sideslip spiral dive as it attempted to climb. Pickard sank with the ship. Dunn succeeded in freeing himself from the wreckage, attempted to rescue Pickard and lost consciousness. Rescuers put out in a small boat and brought Dunn to shore.
